REDS INDICATE LINES HOLDING DESPITE GERMAN CLAIMS

HITLER COMMUNIQUE SAYS SOVIET LOSSES NOW TOTAL 341,000

By the Associated Press

Germans report 141,000 Russians captured, over 200,000 killed and wounded in new smashes at Moscow and Ukraine fronts; Nazi high command asserts two Red armies wiped out, third partly destroyed south of Kiev; Soviet high command notes bitter all-night fighting, says key sectors unchanged; Red warplanes bomb Berlin on second successive night; Swiss reports say Russian resistance forces Hitler to revamp time-table in 49-day-old campaign.

RAF bombers leave great fires raging at Kiel, German naval base; other RAF raiders attack Hamburg, London reports; luftwaffe bombs English airports.

British warships convoy huge war stores to Middle East for "next forward drive."

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Berlin radio said today that one squadron alone of Germany's big Junkers transport planes had brought 80,000 wounded German soldiers back from the central sector of the eastern front, NBC reported. Never before, said the broadcast heard here by NBC, has the German supply stream been subjected to such a strain as in the campaign against Soviet Russia. The transport planes, it said, took more than 2,500,000 kilos—2,750 tons—of war material to the front on outgoing flights and flew the wounded to the rear for medical care on the return trip.

MOSCOW

Moscow, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Red army declared today that heavy losses had been inflicted on 10 more German divisions—six tank and four infantry—in a battle on the eastern front.

Red Star, the army organ, said intercepted German sanitary service messages showed the following losses among the German divisions:

111th infantry—20 per cent.
7th tank—30 per cent.
56th, 297th and 299th infantry 40 per cent.
11th, 13th, 14th and 16th tank—per cent.
18th tank—tremendous.

(On a basis of 15,000 men to a German infantry division and 12,000 men to a German tank division, the Red Army figures indicate casualties of roughly 50,000 men.)

These losses, the Red Star said, are in addition to the numbers of Nazi infantry, tank and mechanized divisions previously reported united.

Its report followed a belated announcement of the first Russian bombing of Berlin.

The announcement that fires were started in Berlin by Russian planes on reconnaissance deep inside Germany cleared away the last of the mystery surrounding a raid on the Nazi capital Thursday night which the Germans attributed to the British.

PREMIER MUSSOLINI BURIES SECOND SON

Predappio, Italy, Aug. 9.—(AP) Premier Mussolini buried his second-born son, Bruno, today in a little cemetery of San Cassiano in Pennio near the graves of Il Duce's blacksmith father and school-teacher mother.

The body was brought here yesterday from Pisa where the 23-year-old air captain was killed Thursday in the crash of an experimental warplane.

BERLIN

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 9—A total claim of 341,000 Russians killed, wounded or captured by new German strokes on central and southern sectors of the eastern front emerged today in three closely spaced communiques from the Hitler headquarters.

This claim, at the end of the seventh week of the Germans' grand offensive, was elaborated by the assertion that 25 Russian divisions had been destroyed—two whole armies and part of a third, deep in the Ukraine.

The supreme commanders of the 12th and sixth Russian armies were reported among the prisoners.

Tremendous quantities of war material were said to be among the loot caught within the tightened panzer circles.

Two communiques from Adolf Hitler's headquarters announced today destruction of trapped Soviet deefnders of Roslavl, 60 miles southeast of Smolensk, the capture of 38,000 prisoners there and the seizure of the rail town of Korosten, one of the northwestern gates to Kiev.

First a special communique listed the 38,000 prisoners and quantities of weapons which, it said, were captured below Smolensk, where the High Command three days ago reported "a new enemy

GENERAL WEYGAND IN VICHY FOR MEETINGS

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Generalissimo Maxime Weygand, Vichy's proconsul in North Africa, conferred today with Chief of State Marshal Petain, Vice Premier Darlan and other government leaders in a rapid-fire round of meetings preliminary to a late afternoon full dress cabinet meeting.

Informed circles said the discussion fitted in the framework of explanations given the United States on French imperial policy earlier in the week when France declared she would shape her policies alone because she alone would have to bear the consequences.

TAX PROGRAM IS CRITICIZED BY SEN. GEORGE

Chairman Predicts That the Senate Finance Committee Will Make a Substantial Increase in the $3,206,200,000 Bill

ALTERNATIVE PLANNED

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—While taking exception to some treasury suggestions for adding approximately $1,000,000,000 to the House-approved tax bill, Chairman George (D-Ga) predicted today the Senate finance committee would make a substantial increase in the $3,206,200,000 measure.

Although the figure approved by the House is the highest in history, George said that "we should raise at least $3,500,000,000, and as much more as we can justify without too great a jar to the economic system."

The Georgia senator told reporters the treasury proposal to increase the starting rate for surtaxes on individual incomes from 5 to 11 per cent would provide "an exceedingly high tax".

George indicated too, that the committee would reject Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal for a modified requirement that husbands and wives file joint income tax returns, when both earn income outside the home. The House struck out a joint return clause from the bill.

As an alternative, George suggested that all husbands and wives divide equally any income they might have and file separate returns—a system now followed in nine states having community property laws.

George endorsed the treasury recommendation for recruiting existing income tax exemptions from $2,000 to $1,500 for married per-

PENNA. TO HELP SAVE GASOLINE

Governor James Agrees to Name Liaison Officer to Study Federal Plans for Conserving Oil and Fuel Supplies and to Direct Pennsylvania's Cooperation Along Lines Suggested by LaGuardia

DIRECT APPEAL WILL BE MADE NEXT WEEK

Harrisburg, Aug. 9—(AP)—Governor James has agreed to name a liaison officer to study federal plans for conserving oil and gasoline supplies, and to direct the state's cooperation along these lines.

Dr. Arnaud C. Marts, director of Pennsylvania's Council of Defense, announced that the governor had given his approval to a two-fold plan for co-operation which an aid to National Oil Coordinator Harold L. Ickes had proposed to him in Washington.

Marts conferred with Ickes yesterday. Beside the liaison officer, the plan includes a direct appeal by Governor James, through federally paid full-page newspaper advertisements next week, urging Pennsylvanians to slash gasoline consumption one-third.

The liaison representative would spend two or three days in Washington next week obtaining the groundwork for a state-wide conservation plan.

Dr. Marts also met with Mayor La Guardia of New York, director of civilian defense, on co-operation between the federal agency and the state and local councils.

PRICE INCREASE IN MILK ORDERED AT PITTSBURGH

Harrisburg, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Milk Control Commission today directed a retail price increase in the Pittsburgh area from 13 to 14 cents a quart, and provided boosts to farmers from ten to 32 cents a 100 pounds, effective August 16.

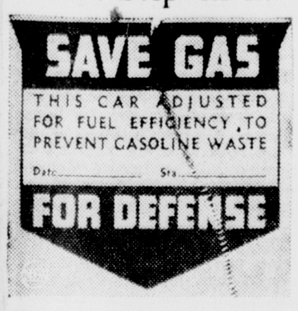

The 14-cent price on retail quarts to consumers applies to grade B, the most commonly used, but a one-cent jump is effective on all other grades.

"This compares with a retail doorstep delivery price in New York of 15½; New Jersey, 14-14½; Chicago, 14; the present price in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit is 12 cents, but it is probable that they will move up to 13 cents for comparable winter prices," said the commission.

STATE SETS UP REGULATIONS TO GOVERN BANKS

Secretary John C. Bell Calls Upon Institutions Under Its Supervision to Exert Greater Effort to Dispose Of Real Estate Holdings

CRUCIAL TIMES AHEAD

Harrisburg, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania banking department today called upon banks under its supervision to exert greater effort to dispose of real estate holdings.

Secretary John C. Bell Jr., made the plea in setting up regulations to strengthen the state's banking structure "to prepare for the approaching crucial times."

The department at the same time reported an increase of $183,056,997 in deposits during the year ended June 30, and a boost of nearly 67 millions in loans to business men which was considered an indication of business improvement.

Bell said real estate disposal was necessary to bring about more substantial compliance with the banking laws placing a time limit of five years upon the right to hold real estate acquired by foreclosure or otherwise in satisfaction of debts owing to the institutions.

This holding period has been extended three times, one year each time, under discretionary powers vested by law in the secretary of banking. Bell did not announce what action would be taken at expiration of the current extension on Nov. 30.

The secretary in his letter accompanying the new regulations said that real estate "has become a

Huge Shipyards at Kearny, N. J., Remain in Grip of CIO Strike While Union Official Who Announced Walkout Calls for Government Intervention "Without Another Hour's Delay" to Hasten Settlement

DELAYS WORK ON BIG CRUISER AND VESSELS

By the Associated Press

The huge shipyards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company at Kearny, N. J., remained in the grip of a CIO strike today, while the union official who announced the walkout called for the government to take over the plant "without another hour's delay."

Peter Flynn, vice president of Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, urged government intervention last night a few hours after Ralph A. Bard, acting secretary of the navy, warned that steps would be taken to get production resumed unless there was a quick settlement.

The company has $493,000,000 worth of defense orders. Seventeen thousand workers have been idle since Thursday.

"We believe," said Flynn in a statement, "the government should step in without another hour's delay. With the union's collective bargaining rights fully protected under government operation, the picket line will instantly become a marching line of American work-

GREAT QUANTITY WHEAT STORED AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Aug. 9—(AP)—Railroads clamped an embargo on wheat shipped to Kansas City elevators for storage, but that didn't stump Kansas and Missouri farmers.

They hauled out carpenter tools and constructed hundreds of new bins and renovated old farm buildings. Many such storage facilities were erected even before the harvest started by far-sighted operators. With cash market and government loan prices flirting with dollar-plus figures, they refused to chance weather loss by dumping valuable grain on the ground.

With the 1941 winter harvest virtually completed, a survey disclosed today that with the exception of the Garden City, Kas., area, where a small amount was so stored, no wheat was piled on the ground in Kansas this year, as in years past.

Although a majority of public elevators are nearly filled, the survey showed an acute storage problem is practically non-existent in the two states. Besides the farmers' own bins, a small but constant movement of wheat into consumptive channels and a disappointing yield in some areas has helped the storage situation.

Railroads, mindful of defense program needs and wary of tying up their cars with wheat, placed the embargo in effect July 14. Receipts at Kansas City immediately dropped to less than 500 cars a day from a daily run of between 1,000 and 2,000 cars. Yesterday only 151 cars were received.

The plane left Lisbon at 3:54 a. m. (EST) and an hour later the American Clipper followed her with 33 passengers en route to New York.

BITTER DEBATES SPLIT LEADERS IN CIO CONVENTION

Torn by Arguments on Allis-Chalmers and North American Aviation Walkouts Earlier This Year Leaders Await Return of Committee

GROUP REFUSES SEATS

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—The UAW-CIO's sixth national convention, split by bitter debates on alleged Communistic leadership of two defense industry strikes, awaited today a special report expected to intensify the factional clashes.

The United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers—torn by arguments on the Allis-Chalmers and North American Aviation walkouts earlier this year—anticipated return of a three-man committee the convention had sent to Milwaukee to conduct a new delegate election at the Allis-Chalmers local.

At the start of the turbulent sessions this week delegates refused to seat the Milwaukee group of 10 on grounds they were elected unconstitutionally. Rejection of the delegation representing 8,000 workers came amid accusations by high union leaders that Communists led the 79-day Allis-Chalmers strike.

UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas said yesterday he understood the Milwaukee local "refused to cooperate" in holding a new vote and that, therefore, the committee was returning, leaving the Wisconsin plant without convention representation.

Verbal battles over leadership of the five-day North American plane plant strike at Inglewood, Calif., also marked yesterday's session. Delegates rejected a grievance committee report which declined

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—Some Democratic house leaders virtually abandoned hope today of passing legislation providing indefinite extension of army service, and sought to salvage from mounting opposition an 18-months extension already approved by the Senate.

Resistance of Muscovites Forces Hitler to Revamp His Schedule

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 9—(AP)—Red Army resistance has forced the German High Command to revamp its time-table for the Russian campaign, but the Nazis still hope for a sweeping victory by the end of September, information reaching here from foreign military observers in Berlin indicated today.

The September goal calls for occupation of Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev and an advance to the Caucasus mountains, these observers reported. Subsequently the program was said to call an an advance to the Urals and establishment of a defense line there.

Originally, Adolf Hitler's plans envisioned capture of Leningrad three weeks after the campaign began and the fall of Moscow soon after, it was said. By the end of August, the Germans and their Axis allies were to have reached Astrakhan on the Caspian Sea, 1,700 miles southeast of Berlin, the information declared.

Completion of the new schedule, the information said, would mean:

1. Germany will set up a defense line from Lake Ladoga in the north to the Volga river east of Moscow, thence south on the west bank of that river to Astrakan.

2. Turkey will be asked in October for free passage of German

B. I. PROBING DETROIT BLAST

Detroit, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and Detroit police launched an inquiry today into the cause of an explosion which turned the Canadian oil tanker Transiter into an inferno and cost two persons their lives.

Five minutes after the 180-foot diesel-powered vessel left port late yesterday afternoon laden with 100,000 gallons of gasoline bound for Canada the tanker exploded and burst into flames on the River Rouge.

Police searched the waters for the bodies of Mrs. Elida Tremblay, 46, of Murray Bay, Que., wife of the captain, and Roger Labonette, 24, a deckhand, survivors related a tale of heroism. Both with flames leaping about him, Captain Rudolph Tremblay, they said, swung the ship in a wide arc to prevent it from drifting downstream and endangering oil docks and the shore. It nosed in the bank near the American Agricultural Company.

Annual August Meteor Shower Is Scheduled to Arrive Monday Night

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The annual August meteor shower, the tears of St. Lawrence or perseid meteors, is due Monday night.

These are the metors which never have failed to appear for 1,110 years straight. They probably were visible in mid-summer long before that, but were recorded first in scientific records in 830 A. D.

Before midnight, look to the northeast to see them; after midnight, right overhead. They fall at a rate of about 30 an hour. Occasionally, a lucky spectator sees dozens in less than an hour.

They are shaped like tear drops, which is the reason the Irish long ago named them after St. Lawrence's tears. They are the safest, as well as the surest, of all meteor displays.

They are grains of dust, but traveling at about 40 miles a second they flash brilliantly as they consume in the friction of the upper air. They burn at about 60 miles altitude.

These bits of dust circle the sun in an ellipse so vast that the meteors take 108 years for a single circuit. They are supposed to be a continuous stream of meteor dust, whose width is estimated variously from 3,000,000 to 15,000,000 miles.

The earth sees them only in mid-

ENSIGNS GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 9—(AP)—Two ensigns at the Pensacola naval air station, convicted of involuntary manslaughter at a court-martial, are under prison sentences for their airplane's decapitation of Mrs. Robert Phillips.

Paul C. Brown of Chicago, pilot of the plane on a routine training flight, was sentenced yesterday to 24 months. His passenger, Joseph C. Thompson of Healdsburg, Calif., received a 12-month sentence. They also were convicted, under approval of President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Knox, on charges of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, and, of carelessly endangering the lives of others.

Mrs. Phillips was killed March 24 while she worked in a turnip field near Robertsdale, Ala. Witnesses at the court martial testified that a plane similar to the ensigns' also swooped low over other fields in the Robertsdale vicinity.

The ensigns, dismissed from the air service, were taken to the navy prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

Vast Amount of Food and Fuel to Be Needed for Southern Maneuvers

HOSPITAL SHIP COMMISSIONED

New York, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The navy today commissioned the U. S. S. Solace, adding to the American fleet its first hospital ship since first World War days.

The Solace is the former 6,209-ton Clyde Mallory liner Iroquois. The navy bought her in July 1940, and since last September she has been undergoing conversion at the Athletic Basin Iron Works in Brooklyn.

The Iroquois was used by the government in October, 1939, to return American nationals from Britain by the way of Ireland.

The Solace was fitted as a modern 400-bed hospital which naval authorities said was as fully equipped as any similar sized hospital on land.

The shining white ship, bearing a green band and a Red Cross on each side — colors prescribed for hospital ships by the Hague convention—was commissioned in brief ceremonies at the Iron Works pier in Brooklyn.

The navy's only other hospital ship is the USS Relief.

Camp Polk, La., Aug. 9.—(AP)—The army, giving up trying to imagine how much will be consumed by the men, animals and machines in the Louisiana maneuvers this summer began speaking today in terms of ships and trains but neglected to mention that everything went double.

A statement was issued declaring that "the amount of food, fuel, forage and equipment required for this fighting force is beyond human imagination but a breakdown to carload lots makes it conceivable."

The army figures were based on consumption by 250,000 men of the Third Army which maneuvers from mid-August to the end of September. But when this force is pitted against the Second Army there will be not 250,000 but 500,000 men in the field.

Contenting itself with facts and figures for a quarter of a million men, the army said:

In 55 days, the third army will eat 54,450 tons of food which includes 2,500,000 dozen eggs, 9,500,000 pounds of bread.

This tonnage, the army said would fill about a dozen average seagoing freighters or a line of railroad cars more than a mile long.

Aside from this, there were these other developments at the state capital:

1. State chairmen of the major parties reminded would-be voters that today is the last on which to register for the September 9 primary, and appealed to soldiers to speed their registrations to home districts in order to be eligible.

2. The banking department announced an increase of $183,056,997 in deposits during the year ended June 30, and a boost of nearly 67 millions in loans to business men as an indication of business improvement.

limited service version of the controversial legislation—and Republican opponents declared they would not compromise either.

With important votes not scheduled until Monday, or possibly Tuesday, President Roosevelt's lieutenants took advantage of a week-end recess to buttonhole undecided members and urge the 18-months extension, and to select a man to offer that compromise.

The opposition based its stand on the ground that the national interest was no more imperilled now than a year ago when the selective service act was passed; that the government made a contract with the Selectees to keep them in uniform only a year; and that the army would not be disorganized—as President Roosevelt said it would—if they were not kept longer.

Representative Cox (D-Ga) and Smith (D-Va) argued that if the nation was not imperilled, Republicans and Democrats alike would not have voted so overwhelmingly for the defense program with its billions of dollars of appropriations.

"If anybody doubts that the national peril is involved," Smith asked, "what is all the shooting about? Why did we appropriate forty billion dollars for national defense?"

With this threatening situation before them, the sponsors of the bill were in fighting mood, and Chairman May (D-Ky) of the Military committee led off the debate with a vigorous speech in its favor.

He stated the Army's position on the issue: Unless there is an extension of service, draftees, National Guardsmen and reservists—who make up a large proportion of the Army's officer personnel—must be mustered out, and the Army will disintegrate.

"The issue," he said, "is whether the Congress will go ahead with what it started to do last year when it passed the original (Selective Service) act."

It would be argued, he said, that the men were promised their discharge after a year of training, but:

"That isn't true. That isn't a fact. The Congress made no such promise, unless it was somebody seeking reelection to office who told his constituents that."

Rep. Fish (R-NY), the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations committee, told the House the bill was part of a "gigantic conspiracy" to involve the United States in the war.

ers rushing back to pick up where they left off one of the most vital jobs in the national defense program."

Flynn said his manifesto was issued "merely as a statement of policy so that the general public may know the union's attitude." He said he had not communicated with any government agency.

The union said it called the strike to back up demands for what it said was a modified union shop as recommended by the defense mediation board. The management declared a closed shop was asked and rejected the provision in a proposed work contract.

Under construction at the plant are two cruisers, six destroyers, three tankers and a number of cargo vessels. In addition the company has orders for five other cruisers, 21 additional destroyers and a number of merchant vessels.

The navy department's warning issued by Bard said "if management and labor cannot arrive at a settlement, steps must be taken which will in one way or another put this huge shipbuilding plant back into production at the earliest possible moment."

On another defense front a non-union walkout of several hundred workmen at the Curtiss-Wright Corporation propeller division plant at Caldwell, N. J., threatened to stop production on defense orders exceeding $100,000,000. The plant employs 1,493 workers.

Frank Sherwood, head of a workers committee which asked a general 20 per cent hourly wage increase in undisclosed scales, with a base rate of 75 cents hourly, said the walkout was not a union move nor a protest against a collective bargaining election held Thursday which was won by an independent union.

The company rejected the demand and said that Propeller Craft, the union which won the election, was the proper agency to make any requests.

Pittsburgh had a new strike and a threat of another next Monday. The McKees Rocks plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company, employing about 2,500, closed after the CIO Steel Workers called a walkout in a jurisdictional dispute with an independent local union which has been recognized by the National Labor Relations Board as exclusive bargaining agency at the plant. About 5,000 white collar salaried employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company threatened to strike Monday for a $10 a month increase in all salary brackets and a 6 2/3 per cent raise for employes who work only 40 hours a week. Present scales were not revealed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9—(AP)—A work stoppage which has "seriously delayed" projects at the Philadelphia navy yard was revealed today by navy spokesmen, who said 348 men are involved.

A statement issued at the yard, where big units of the two-ocean navy are under construction, said the men stayed away from their jobs in protest of a general agreement for Atlantic seaboard shipyards providing time and a half for overtime and Saturday pay. They formerly received double time.

With Our Boys At Indiantown Gap

By F. L. FITZPATRICK

Indiantown Gap, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The ranks of Pennsylvania's 28th division have been depleted by 202 men—81 of whom entrained last night for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for specialized training as members of the regular army air corps.

Captain Henry S. Matthews, Washington, D. C., post recruiting officer, disclosed that an additional 121 from the "Iron Division" will leave this encampment Monday for the southern air school. He said the quota from Indiantown Gap is 300, and declared that number will probably be reached by the middle of next week.

"I haven't noticed any effect on the rate of enlistments due to passage by the Senate of the extended service act," Capt. Matthews said. "I do not see why the extension should have any effect on such enlistments."

Knotty Indian Problem Confronts Government in Making Plans for Construction of Kinzua Reservoir

A knotty 20th century "Indian problem" will confront the federal government when Army engineers get a go-ahead signal for construction of the $35,700,000 dam and reservoir on the Allegheny river near Kinzua, it was pointed out today by William G. Smock, Pittsburgh Associated Press writer.

Although a bill authorizing the combined flood control and stream pollution project needs only President Roosevelt's signature to become law, appropriation of the necessary money is expected to be delayed until after the current national emergency.

When the money finally is appropriated by congress, the department of the interior will face the problem of what to do with several hundred Seneca and Cornplanter Indians on the Allegheny reservation in New York state and the Cornplanter Grant in Warren county.

At Harrisburg, State Secretary of Forests and Waters G. Albert Stewart said today he believed the project apparently is headed for the deferred list because of national defense expenditures.

"I think we'll have to lick the world first before they find the money for this project," said Stewart, in whose department is vested the authority to negotiate land purchases and options in connection with the flood control work.

Stewart said he thought the government would put off financing the Warren county project until the vast outlay of money for defense purposes slows up. President Roosevelt has indicated a backlog of such projects would be built up as a "cushion" against recession when the defense effort ends.

The Indians live on land, given them by treaty, which will become part of the huge 37-mile long reservoir. Their homes and fields will be flooded at intervals when the 152-foot high dam impounds flood water for gradual release.

Colonel D. Lee Hooper, of the U. S. Army Engineers Pittsburgh office, said preliminary survey work and project reports on the dam have been completed but that detailed construction plans and specifications would not be made until after he receives instructions from the secretary of war. The order will follow appropriation of necessary funds, it was pointed out.

Col. Hooper said he thought the problem of what to do with the Indians might delay start of construction even after the national emergency ends and other projects, now being held up, were begun.

It has been pointed out that about 900 Seneca Indians live on the Allegheny reservation, a tract of land extending from the New York state border to Salamanca, N. Y. On the Cornplanter Grant, given to the Indians by the state in 1791, are only about 40 persons. However, there are about 550 Indians in various parts of the country who have an interest in this land.

The reservoir would inundate only part of the Indian lands in New York state, but would completey erase the Cornplanters' 640 acres of bottom land.

Several years ago, the Cornplanters were given a chance by the state to move to the Blue Hole country in Fayette county but declined through Chief Windsor H. Pierce, great-great-grandson of Chief Cornplanter.

The Kinzua dam will dram the largest area and have the largest reservoir volume of any of the 10 flood control projects in the upper Ohio flood control system.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 11

Murder

CAROL had got through her big scene nicely and at her exit applause had started in the orchestra and thundered solidly through the whole house. I realized then that our audience was not as lethargic as we had supposed, but that suspense was hovering over them as well as us. They waited, as we were waiting, for the evening to end safely. That hand had been for Carol's courage as well as for her acting.

Through the wide French doors I could see her in the wings making toward the stairs, both Peterson and Jeff close at her heels. Almost two thirds over now, and Carol was still safe.

There were only Eve and old Ben Kerry and I on stage now, and in a moment Eve followed Carol through the door on stage right. Kerry lounged in the chair beside the big golden oak desk where I sat writing what was supposed to be a passionate love note. I scribbled, "Green Apples, Green Apples, Eve North in Green Apples" and rushed through my few lines with Kerry. He rose now, heavily, and with an avuncular pat on my shoulder started for the door.

The act was nearly over now, a little scene with Eve, then Carol's entrance and then the blessed respite of an intermission.

It was the half-smothered sound he made that caused me to look up from my desk and stare at old Ben Kerry and wonder hysterically if he had gone mad. Instead of exiting through the door right he had closed it softly and turned and taken one faltering step back into the room.

And then I saw his face.

For one terrifying moment I thought it wasn't Kerry's face at all. In spite of the florid make-up that he used, it had somehow the look of a plaster cast, numb and frozen. But his eyes darted wildly around the stage, stopping for a moment as they rested on me and seeing nothing.

I searched frantically for something to ad lib. "Back so soon?" rose inanely to my lips and I smothered it and could think of nothing else. I had to get the old man off the stage. Eve wouldn't make her entrance until I had.

I tried to catch his eye and motion toward the door. He stared at me and made no move to go. Silence pressed down in cold stiffling clouds over the house and then was stabbed by a titter in the audience.

I got out of my chair at last and took Kerry by the shoulders, turning him forcibly around to face the door. The titter spread to a running laugh, rolling through the audience, the balcony, the boxes. I said, trying to fight the laughter, "Good night, Uncle George," and in Kerry's ear I muttered, "For God's sake, get out!" I held the door open for him. It was then, I guess, I screamed.

Before I touched the shapeless mass on the floor at my feet, even before I saw the sharp glimmer of the knife beside it, I knew that she was dead. I knew from the way the thick velvet of the cape fell over her body and from the terrible stillness of it. I knew it and yet I screamed, "Carol, Carol!" and I tried to lift her.

I saw the jacket then, the shimmering white jacket that was splotched now with thick green stains and crumpled under her head. With feverish fingers I tore the big black cape from her shoulders. My arms went limp and numb with horror.

The back beneath the cape was hideously shriveled, the arms and shoulders a network of ancient brutal scars. Somehow I managed to put my hand under her head and turn it toward me. Eve North's dead eyes stared up into my face.

Aftermath Of Murder

IT was half past four when we left the theater. Carol sat between Jeff and me in the cab, her hands working spasmodically in her lap at the little ball of felt that had, much earlier in the evening, been a hat.

It was no good. If I could blot out Eve's face there would be Carol's. Not Carol now, white and tired, but Carol as she ran down from her dressing room when she heard my scream, and stopped and stood there above the grotesque figure in her velvet wrap.

I was crouching over Eve, staring up at Carol. I had waited for her to faint or to cry, but not to laugh. She had reached out her hand to lift a fold of the black velvet and to finger it, as though a sales girl had just pushed a bolt over the counter toward her, and she had laughed. Then Jeff slapped her, hard, for the print of his hand was white and then red across her face. He put his arm around her and led her away. She was crying then and the long choking sobs were almost as awful as that first terrible laughter.

It was Amelia's face that was the worst of all. There had been no grief nor horror on it, just a cold look that made it seem as dead as Eve's. Only once had Amelia shown any emotion. When she had started to go to Eve and Peterson's hand shot out to grasp her wrist, she had wrenched herself free as easily as if her arm had been imprisoned in a filmy spider web.

Kneeling beside her mistress she had lifted the cloak and thrown it over Eve's back and shoulders. Slowly she stood up. "You've killed her," she said. Each word was an icicle. "Don't stare at her now. She'd rather you kill her than stare."

I rubbed a clear space in the steamy window glass and peered out. We were passing Forty-eighth Street. Could it have been only last night, only nine hours ago, that Carol and I walked past this street on our way to the theater? My mind went hurtling back over those hours, seeing it all in gruesome detail; I couldn't stop it.

That static moment after Amelia's outburst which had been jabbed by Peterson's quiet cursing and Sullavan's rough voice barking into the telephone. The men trooping in from the radio cars. Blue uniforms dotting the stage, herding us into corners, standing over Eve's body. Orders in brief, sharp tones.

The door swinging wide to admit more men in uniform, more plain-clothes men, the coroner, photographers. They kept on coming, a steady one-way stream through old Nick's stage door. And in the alley outside the mumbling of the quick-gathered crowd and the yammering of the newspapermen.

I had answered questions, the same questions, until the words I spoke had taken on an unfamiliar sound and my throat grew dry and bitter. Over and over I told my story. I told it to a man with beetling brows and a ridiculously gentle voice who was the Inspector, and the police stenographer's pencil flew across his notebook as I talked. I told it to a fat detective sergeant and to a skinny red-haired one. I droned through it again for the two special investigators from the District Attorney's office, one who fumed and snapped at me, one who seemed to hardly listen.

Jinx Contributes

THOSE hours had the timelessness of a nightmare. When for a moment I had stood alone watching the coroner examine Eve, it seemed that all of it had been squeezed into a few brief seconds. But when I faced the barrage of seemingly endless questions I felt that my whole life had been spent on the stage of the Colony Theater and that those words were the only ones I had ever spoken.

We had heard the newsboys on the street yelling about the "Big Theyater Moider" before they had let us go.

Now it was over. Eve was dead and Carol was alive. There had been no arrests. I leaned my head wearily against the icy pane and it felt good. There had been no arrests. Then it wasn't over. Eve was dead but it wasn't over. Somewhere, someone was still waiting to kill Carol.

The cab stopped in front of our apartment and we went in. Jinx was sitting cross-legged on the bench in the lobby, half asleep. He jumped up with a start when the door slammed closed behind us and his bland, sleepy face told me that no word of the Colony murder had reached his ears yet. None of us wanted to inform him; we'd had enough of murder for one night.

Jinx winked one of his popping eyes at Jeff. "I see you ain't scared of riding with me no more," he chuckled.

Jeff made a noble attempt at lightness. "You're the safest pilot I've ever known, Jinx. I never know fear with you at the stick."

"You musta been scared Sunday. You walked up and down."

"I wasn't here on Sunday," Jeff said.

"Sure, you was, Mr. Troy."

I said, a little sharply, "There wasn't anyone here Sunday, Jinx. You've got your dates mixed."

He looked puzzled. "Yeah, I guess so. Sorry."

We went into the apartment and it was a warm and pleasant contrast to the bitter cold outside. I went straight to the cabinet under the built-in bookcases and put a bottle of Scotch on the coffee table. "I want a drink," I said. "A good, stiff drink. Do you?"

"Yes," Jeff said.

Carol reached into the cabinet and brought out a bottle of brandy and a shot glass. She filled the glass to the top and gulped it down. It was Courvoisier and very strong. Without even a grimace she refilled the glass and swallowed. When you'd been through what that girl had, I thought, you probably couldn't feel anything. Suddenly she set the glass down, walked slowly to the window and stood staring out.

"If I hadn't left my wrap on the stairs, Eve wouldn't have put it on. Eve wouldn't be dead. Eve would still be living and I . . ." She stopped and covered her eyes with clenched fists.

Jeff poured another shot of brandy and followed her. "Drink this."

With Our Boys at Indiantown Gap

By Special Correspondence

Indiantown Gap, Aug. 6—Wednesday comes to the camp area here and we find it one of great activity and excitement. Our selectees arrived here in groups of thirty-three and 21 men respectively on Tuesday and Wednesday. They are a fine bunch of fellows and the men are all well pleased with them. The boys hail from Camp Croft, South Carolina, and a very hearty lot they are. After the men receive their various positions in the company and also their equipment that is to be issued to them they will leave for a seven day furlough which will be without a doubt one of the finest things that has happened to them since they have arrived here.

Fortunately we have enough rifles down here that every man in the company now has a rifle and they were all glad to get them as what is the use in soldiering without a rifle or some weapon that will make things more interesting. As a whole the men are quite well trained in every way and are a benefit to any organization which they might be in and luckily we have received them.

Several of these men are from the immediate vicinity around here although none of them in our own organization are as such. It seems that the climate these men are used to is really quite warm so therefore they don't mind this old man sunshine beating down on you all of the time.

The entire brigade (the 56th) went on an all day hike which consisted of approximately twenty miles. I don't mind telling you that it really was warm that day and every man came through without having to fall out. However, some of the boys had pretty sore feet but they all were up and ready to go the next morning so I guess that they will all be able to take what the army has to throw at them.

The Air Corps of the United States Army has set up a recruiting station here at the post and it is requested by them that all of the men who wish to reenlist in this branch of the service be encouraged to do so. We have not as yet lost any men to this cause except those that were heretofore mentioned in this column. We hope that we will not lose any men and if we do we know they will make good soldiers in whatever branch of the service they serve.

Last night at about 7:00 o'clock there was a very impressive ceremony at the regimental recreation hall. A technical sergeant from Company D of this regiment, and his bride were married by the regimental chaplain, Capt. Moser. The bride was dressed in navy blue and the groom, as would be expected, was in full dress summer uniform. As the newly wedded couple came out of the hall a firing squad of six men detailed for the occasion fired two volleys over the heads of the couple. After due congratulations had been said by the various members of the groom's organization, the couple left in a private car for a short honeymoon. We wish the sergeant and his bride the best of luck and hope that they will live a long and happy life together.

Our problem child, Corporal Carl E. Brown, has been cutting up again, only this time you really couldn't call it cutting up. It seems that the most sleepy man in the company yesterday happened to be Corporal Brown and it so happened that he went to sleep. The lieutenant, upon finding him asleep, soon aroused the sleeping noncom and it cost Corporal Brown just a few of the privileges that mean so much to him. Well, Corporal, maybe next time you will think before going to sleep. After all, you can't win wars by sleeping, although it is a nice pastime.

FLASH: Our First Sergeant Joseph L. Schearer, who was in charge of the train which brought our first contingent of selectees to camp, has announced that he was commended on his ability in the handling of the men on the train. Also the seargeant is very proud to announce that he spoke over the radio upon arriving in the Lickdale Station (Lickdale is the station where all of the trains come in to the Gap.) The sergeant brought the entire 407 men through from Camp Croft, South Carolina, to the Gap without losing a single man or having the slightest mishap.

The prize story of the week has been held back until now because it really is a good policy to leave the best for the last they say. Pvt. 1cl Leslie L. Brady, who is the guidon bearer for the company, was supposed to go out and take up a defense position on a combat problem. Pvt. Brady found himself a nice shady spot and proceeded to go to sleep. Well, it came time for the men to come in and thinking that Brady had gone on some errand for some one they came in without him. At about 9 p. m. in came the worn and bedraggled soldier. He claims that he strained a muscle in his leg and couldn't make it in until he rested his leg. Well, Brady, it's a great story but oh my, it looks awfully thin to us.

We are proud to announce the graduation of three of our NCO's from the division chemical warfare school. The men who graduated from this course are: Corporals Orvis E. Kinch, Samuel G. Bowers, and Sgt. Joseph J. Greer. We congratulate these men and hope that by their education in this type of warfare they may (if needs be) be able to save some of our lives.

It won't be long now until we will be shoving off for our big maneuver and our first one. We leave for the state of Virginia on or about the 23rd of this month and it really is going to be quite a thrill for the fellows to see all of the action we are going to see while we are there. As the plans for departure develop your correspondent will try and keep you posted on all that happens up to and including the day we shove off.

This being about all of the news for this time we leave you with this thought in mind, the boys will soon be leaving for a distant port so what do you say and answer some of those letters and write to the fellows often. So until my next column I remain yours truly, your Times-Mirror correspondent.

TIMELY BULLETIN

A bulletin prepared by the secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce for business men of the community stresses some little-known facts about the importance of the agricultural industry in the county, and to the business ability of the farmers who operate our farms.

It is particularly timely right now, since arrangements are being completed at present for community fairs in four different rural localities. Speaking of these suburban neighbors the bulletin says in part:

"To many town people, a farmer is practically a stranger—almost as being from a different world. Scarcely ever is he considered as an industrialist and a business man.

"But consider! Not only does he have to contend with the labor problem, the marketing of his produce, the maintenance of his costly equipment, as you and the manufacturer do, but he has to contend with the weather and innumerable pests of which you know nothing. He has to know something of chemistry as related to his soil; he must be more-or-less of a mechanic; he must be an accountant. In other words, whether you have heretofore granted it or not, he is a well-rounded businessman; and—he must be efficient to prosper. When he prospers, as most farmers do, his annual income in dollars and cents is as impressive as that of the shop man or the white-collar man."

The bulletin states that a recent Federal report credits Warren County with 2104 farms on which live approximately 23,000 men, women and children, whose farmland and buildings are valued at close to $5,200,000.

"In the course of the year of which we speak," the secretary says, "the farmers of Warren County produced milk, farm butter, eggs, wool and honey valued at $1,772,880; potatoes valued at $99,630; tame hay $370,740; fruits $69,270; and grain crops $327,450." The total of these farm products is $2,639,970—an impressive figure to compare with the Warren Borough industrial payroll of $2,883,600 for the same year.

The Chamber secretary feels that this rural market is one which Warren business men should not neglect and asks, "Why should they feel more at home—if they do—in neighboring towns or that they get better bargains elsewhere? We have what they want in Warren! It is up to us to persuade them of that fact!"

He closes with a plea that all merchants cooperate in efforts to make Warren the outstanding trading center of this section; and to such a plea we add a hearty AMEN!

Warren women will be interested to learn that even the beauty industry is being hit by the defense drive, for there's a shortage of zinc oxide for rouge and creams, aluminum chloride for deodorants, and bergamot, a perfume oil imported from Italy.

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

"A DAY OF SILENCE"

REV. M. I. HARDING
Epworth Methodist Church

Text: "Come ye apart in the wilderness and rest awhile."

Leaving the temple, Jesus went with His disciples to the Mount of Olives and there He spoke to them of the last things. It was also at this time that He gave those well-known parables of the Ten Virgins, the King returning with his servants, and the Parable of the Talents. His public labors ended, He sought a day of retirement, "a Sabbath to His soul before the Great Conflict". He spent the day at Bethany or in its vicinity, and doubtless in the company of His disciples. His disciples had suffered a great strain during the previous days, and there were many things He wanted to say to them concerning His coming death. They saw the growing hostility of the rulers and felt from the Master's words that a great crisis was at hand. Part of the day may have been spent in preparing their hearts for the dark days ahead. But it is also conjectured that a great part of the day was spent by Jesus in quiet communion with the Father.

All strong souls are born in solitude. Elijah was strengthened in solitude after the conflict on Mount Carmel. The burning bush where Moses met God was in the wilderness. It is in the quiet places that the soul finds God. It has been said, "If we would cease to be restless it must be at a shrine."

It is modern to laugh at the poor monks of the Middle Ages, who sought seclusion in the dens and caves of the earth, but let it be remembered by the Church and the Christian that these monks came forth from these places of solitude to work righteousness and to stop the mouths of lions, and out from these souls of solitude have come words that have thrilled the hearts of multitudes. The hymn of the cross is an example of the faith, hope, and love born in the solitude.

Jesus knew the power and value of secret prayer and communion. The soul takes on strength from such waiting, and it is for the want of such prayer that many souls go down in ignominious defeat before the violent assaults of the enemy. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." "Be still and know that I am God".

"Peace, perfect peace by thronging duties pressed,
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest."

Vatican Only 108 Acres But Is Sovereign State

VATICAN CITY is the smallest sovereign state in the world. It comprises 108.7 acres, about the size of an 18-hole golf course. It is entirely surrounded by the city of Rome. And yet, 37 countries send diplomatic representatives to the Holy See.

The Vatican state came into being with the signing of the Lateran Treaty with Italy in 1929. The stamp above, one of the cross and orb series, was issued in 1933.

From 1870, the year of the unification of Italy, to 1929 the Sovereign Pontiff was only a guest in his own household and a voluntary prisoner. The Vatican was the property of the Italian government, which merely granted use of it.

The population of the autonomous Vatican State is slightly more than 1000. Under the Pope, there is a governor, secretary-general, central council, three courts, an "army" of 110 Swiss Guards and a police force of 100.

The Vatican has its own coinage, postage stamps, post office, welfare center, railway station and telegraph office. Marconi himself built the Vatican radio station.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

MEN OF THE PAST

Had there been headliners in days past, men like those described below would have had their names in big type. How many do you recognize?

1. What man was born on an island, died on an island, but once ruled nearly all of Europe?

2. Who caused the walls of Jerico to fall?

3. What former secretary of the treasury was fatally shot by a U. S. vice president in a duel?

4. What famous man from Rome once successfully invaded Britain?

5. What American ship master, later a famous pirate, was commissioned by Britain to hunt pirates, and was later hanged as one himself for attacking British vessels?

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—"Sergeant York" is the only movie ever written from the Congressional Record.

As late as 1935, it was being written into the Record that Sgt. Alvin C. York, of Pall Mall, near Jamestown, in the mountains of Tennessee, could have made a fortune by exploiting his position of No. 1 hero of the World War—but chose only to pull in a few dollars for speeches and such, when the Bible Class of the Church of Christ and Christian Union needed them to carry on.

Until 1941, he turned down more offers from the stage and movies than the most romantic miss ever had in wildest fancy. But finally the need for funds to carry on his work in the Tennessee hill country drove the still towering, silent hill-billy, to put his John Henry on a Hollywood contract.

When he did, there were two stipulations he insisted should be written into it. The first was that Gary Cooper, whom he had never seen off-screen, should play the role of Al York. The second was that there would be no act of heroism or deed of bravery in the movie which had not been written into the Congressional Record.

Reams Of Description

THE results were that the studio making the film had to trade Bette Davis to get Gary Cooper for the title role—and the story's authors had to go to the Congressional Record for every detail of the battle scenes.

What they found there were reams of description, introduced into the Senate record by Sen. Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who still holds forth on the Senate floor and is the third oldest member of the upper house in point of continuous service. On the House side were additional reams of lurid description introduced by a slim, short-statured congressman from Pickett county, Tenn. He was addressed then as Rep. Cordell Hull.

Having seen the picture and read the Record, I can vouch for once that the Congressional Record proved a thoroughly adequate scenario. As a matter of fact there was one place where the Record was so vivid that the script writers had to tone it down. It had to do with the number o Germans Sergeant York picke off.

According to the Record, th gaunt, deliberate York (he wa then a corporal, left in charge o a seven-man squad because al other officers and men had bee killed or wounded) fired his rifl until it was burning hot and whe 90 Germans marched down th hill to surrender (42 more wer picked up later), it was becaus nearly 30 of their comrades ha fallen under the deadly fire o this one-man blitzkrieg from th Tennessee uplands. The Holly wood scripters must have decide that was a little too much killin for the second elder of the Churc of Christ. They cut the number i half.

OTHERWISE they followed th Congressional Record . . . an apparently close enough to su the Sergeant. When he saw th picture for the first time, his firs and only comment was: "It shor was natural."

The big, gangling, kindly Ser geant was in town recently an found the front door of the Whit House as wide open to him as tha of his house on the farm in th hill country. There is at least on other door in Washington that even wider open any time Sg Alvin C. York wants to walk u to it.

It's the one over at the War De partment. There isn't a man liv ing (and few dead from the Rev olution on) who is a better ad f the U. S. Army. A rip-roarin hell-raising hill man who got re ligion and had to wrestle with h conscience before patriotism ove came his objections to war, Yor is the kind of hero that the pro agandists dream about. And th script writers, too. Imagine hav ing to do nothing more tha sticking to the letter of the Con gressional Record to get a movi

Storks that summer in Denmark spend their winters on Egypt's Nile river.

BY JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The tangle in which National League pennant contenders have managed to involve themselves may straighten itself out to some degree during the week-end.

The Brooklyn Dodgers are on top of the heap today by three percentage points although tied in won-lost reckoning with the St. Louis Cardinals, who play three games in two days with the third-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh, making a great drive, stumbled 1-0 yesterday on a magnificent one-hit pitching performance by 23-year-old Paul Erickson, who hadn't won a game for the Chicago Cubs previously this season.

All that kept the young right-hander from the pitching hall of fame was a single by Bob Elliott in the seventh inning. The Cubs, who combed John Lanning for 10 hits, collected their only run in the fifth inning on a walk, a double by Bill Nicholson and a single by Clyde McCullough.

This showed the Pirates how difficult their uphill battle must be. It was their third loss in 22 contests, ending a six-game winning streak. Since the first of August they habe cut a game and a half off the margin of the Cardinals, but even with their remarkable surge have lost an additional half-game to the Dodgers.

The week-end series at St. Louis should make or break the Pirates.

Brooklyn came through yesterday with its seventh straight victory as Whitlow Wyatt pitched six-hit ball to bulldoze the Boston Braves, 6-2. It was the 15th win for Wyatt.

An 11th-inning homer by Babe Young brought the New York Giants a 3-2 triumph over the Phillies in the only other National League tilt.

The slide of the New York Yankees continued with a 5-3 defeat by the Philadelphia Athletics in a night engagement which Bob Johnson won with his 20th circuit smash with two on in the fourth.

This was the first victory for the A's in six games and the American League leaders' sixth setback in eight contests.

The second-place Cleveland Indians were idle, but profited by a half-game.

The third-place Boston Red Sox outhit Washington, 16-14, and bunched their blows for a 15-8 triumph over the Senators, who haven't won a game played in Boston this year.

The Chicago White Sox rode roughshod over the St. Louis Brown for a 16-2 conquest.

St. Joe's Play Host To Butler Tomorrow

The St. Joseph Boys' Club softball team will entertain the Butler Adrian Club tomorrow afternoon on the West Side diamond in a doubleheader with the first game starting at two o'clock.

The visitors, one of the strongest teams out of Butler, will provide plenty of opposition for the local boys.

A silver collection will be taken up during both contests to help defray expenses of the Butler outfit.

T. Schinitski, with ten victories against only two losses to his credit, will start the first game for the visitors. The local battery was not announced.

CASEYS TOPPLE RECS IN TORRID SOFTBALL GAME

The K. of C. defeated the Recreation Center in a hot and heavy fracas in the City Softball League last night, 8-4, at a tempo which had the players at a near-boiling point various times for various reasons.

The game should have ended the second half of the loop, but due to mathematical opportunities for the R. C. to cop the same, all games rained out may have to be played.

So Monday evening the Elks will go into battle with the Caseys and if the latter club wins this contest, everything will be over in the second half. But a loss would force the playoff of the St. Joe's vs. Recreation Center and K. of C. vs. St. Joe's games.

Following the decision on the second half the complicated situation in the first half will be ironed out.

Harry Wooster pitched fine four hit ball to win last night for the Caseys and his mates scored eight times on eight hits to give him good support.

Harness Racing's Survival Hinges On Replacements For Old Guard

Driver Lee Smith lets Bill Gallon know how much he appreciates colt's victory in Hambletonian

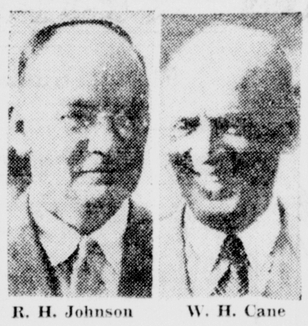

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 9—It will take more than gasless nights and Sundays to restore to harness racing the proud position it once held.

The running horse game is too fast and fascinating.

What chance the sulky sport has of surviving on any sort of Grand Circuit scale depends on what measure of success its sponsors have in their race against time.

Their task is to interest more young men . . . to obtain replacements in the rapidly diminishing ranks of the Old Guard.

R. H. Johnson W. H. Cane

They could use a few more like Dunbar Bostwick of the jumping and polo playing set, and might well use his reason for driving as a sales talk.

It is that he can pilot trotters without any weight-making problem and can continue to do so as long as he feels like it.

Dunbar Bostwick, who at 55 practically is an apprentice in standardbred racing, was just a trifle too heavy to follow in the stirrups of his famous brothers, A. C. and G. H.

A. C. rode over timber for Ambrose Clark. He later owned and trained outstanding runners, including Mate.

But A. C. lacked the physical advantage as a gentleman jockey which still belongs to G. H. or Pete Bostwick, who continues to pilot jumpers at a natural 122.

Dunbar fears severe reducing didn't do A. C.'s health any good, and for that important reason sums up his brother's illustrious riding career as a big mistake.

Thousands See Trotters For First Time at Goshen

W. H. Cane annually hops up the harness dodge by running the Hambletonian Stake for 3-year-old trotters over his triangular mile track at Good Time Park, Goshen, a little cross-roads town 45 miles from Manhattan.

Billy Cane did a good job of selling this show to New York as the Kentucky Derby of the whirring wheels. It now plays to 25,000, all the ramshackle stands hold, and was worth $38,729 this trip. In Lexington, Ky., in 1929, when the total swag came to $55,484, there were no more than 2400 paid admissions.

The Hambletonian serves as an excellent show window for a dying game. Thousands see the trotters for the first time at Goshen.

R. Horace Johnston, a manufacturer of cotton piece goods and yarns in Charlotte, N. C., attended the Hambletonian for the first time three years ago as the guest of William N. Reynolds, the Winston-Salem tobacco tycoon whose Mary Reynolds the veteran Ben White brought down in front in the big number in 1933.

Horace Johnston, who had owned show horses since he was a boy and who had bred them for years on his 300-acre farm near Charlotte, was so thrilled that he wound up buying the 5-year-old Ed Lasaster from Bill Reynolds.

CANADIAN OPEN TITLE MAY GO CANNUCK AGAIN

Toronto, Aug. 9—(AP)—Two Canadian professionals who have absorbed one important lesson from their United States rivals—that there's nothing like a good swat to carry the ball somewhere near the cup—today sought to bring home the Canadian Open Golf Championship that has gone over the border for 26 years in a row.

The Canadians were Bobby Gray, Jr., who held a two-stroke lead over the field going into the final 36 holes today, and Gerard Proulx, a consistent clouter from Montreal.

Gray fired a 65 that amazed his rivals and the galleries, and also set a competitive record for the Lambton course, to reach the halfway mark with a total of 135. Clustered behind him were six important contenders from the United States, then came Proulx with a pair of par 70's.

Johnny Bulla, another tremendous swatter from Chicago, was second with 137. Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith and Amateur Tom Draper of St. Louis, the first-day leader, had 138's, and Defending Champion Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Lloyd Mangrum, of Monterey Park, Calif., were tied with 139's.

According to estimates, each American family used approximately 2295 pounds of finished steel in 1939.

Pioneers And Forge Battle Tomorrow In One Game At Irvine

Society note—Bring a well filled basket, they're going to have a picnic at Wilder Field, Irvine tomorrow. Well, it might not be quite the same kind of picnic, but when the Meadville Pioneers clash tomorrow afternoon with the National Forge in a single game at three o'clock, every loyal baseball fan in this section is expected to be present to lend a hand to the cause, for the fracas shapes up as the "natural" of the summer among all the games past or coming on the Forge schedule.

All season the followers of the Irvine club have been asking for this game and here it is, right in their laps now, to do with it what they will.

Mike Cannavino has sent no lineup for his aggregation in tomorrow's game, but with an amazing record behind the club and the Forge record also being outstanding, both teams will have the best nine men they can get on the field when the umpire orders play to begin.

In fact, rumors have it that both clubs may "spike" their lineups a bit for this struggle, because the victory means plenty and they'll be fighting for blood.

If fans in this district like an exciting hard ball program, tomorrow afternoon's game should then be right down their alleys. For Cannavino's got a scrappy club, and this game has been built up for far too long to let the outcome be anything for either team to trifle with.

Both clubs have predicted victory for themselves, and both are mighty confident that they'll win.

The Forgers will start their regular lineup with Freddie Gagliardi slated to take the mound assignment.

EAST ALL-STARS GETTING READY TO MEET GIANTS

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Eastern All-Star football team, which will play the New York Giants Sept. 3 in the sixth annual Fresh Air Fund game, was completed today when Dave Allerdice, Princeton's great passer; Jim Castiglia, line-crushing fullback from Georgetown, and Pat Martinelli, Scranton University center, were added to the squad.

The entire squad is due to report Tuesday to go to the training camp at New York Military Academy, Cornwall-on-Hudson.

The selection of the eastern team this year was based to a considerable extent upon experience with the Notre Dame system, which will be taught by Coach Jim Crowley of Fordham. It's a big squad, averaging 202 pounds, and includes such well-known players as Charley O'Rourke and Chet Gladchuk of Boston College, Walt Matuszczak and Uick Drahos of Cornell, Frank Reagan of Pennsylvania and Augie Lio of Georgetown in place of the small-college "unknowns" who beat the Giants last year.

RUSSELL FIELD FENCE ABOUT DONE; FIELD HOUSE MAY BE NEXT PROJECT; LIGHTS POSSIBILITY IN FEW YEARS

It certainly didn't take them long to put the finishing touches on the fence project at Russell Field upon receiving the steel. The corrugated structure, which was delivered Monday to this city, is nearly complete at this writing and probably will be done when you read this column, which means that it was only four days in the construction stage. That's the way things should move along, and it makes everyone feel better all the way around. It's only a suggestion we have here, and as we understand it it may be included in next year's school program which will be swell, but otherwise this corner would figure it to be wise to build the field house for Russell Field now, while the park is being remodeled, and doing everything at once. Of course, it must be realized that the silver with which to do all this is limited, but many costs could be saved, we believe, by making it one big project, instead of adding piece by piece. However, if the field house can be included in next year's program, there will be no disappointments, and within five years Warren will have a field second to none in the section.

It's quite certain that with the fence enclosing the park now, sports are going to enjoy better business at the juke boxes starting with the fast approaching football season. Therefore, it looks as though next year will see some baseball back in Warren, and whether the government rations gasoline or not, fans will be able to "hoof" it over to Russell Field to see some fine entertainment on the diamond—that is, unless they ration shoe leather also. But another point this writer would like to bring out, and this is especially to the independent football, baseball, and also scholastic grid teams is that if they all would like to play a percentage of games under mazdas in a few years to come, the easiest way to get a lighting system (which, incidentally can be installed under new figures we have, for no more than $8,000) would be to deposit a percentage of each gate from every athletic contest at the field for the next few years, all in one big savings until enough money was in the ex-chequer to make it possible for them to play under the stars.

COFFIN CORNER CANNONADE . . . The downtown coaches association is swinging into action across the street in Harry's "Fountain of Youth", and you can drop in most any night and get a line on the Red Jackets . . . But here are some added things for them to worry over, if they should desire . . . The boys want to know if you're going to fill a Jacket uniform this fall Harry Wooster . . . Any guy that can pitch softball and win like you do, certainly can stand another year on the gridiron . . . Quit kidding them, Harry, Father Time doesn't rule with such an iron hand . . . Anyway, you aren't old, just married . . . so we're betting you make the first touchdown . . . "Brud" Murphy, of Jamestown, is reported to have a game knee . . . Draft news tells us the new registration won't take any fellows until the first of the year, probably, so Martines probably will be in there . . . A couple of badly needed linemen will be back on the high school squad this season, and though they fought a losing battle this spring with that tough subject trigonometry, things are fixed so they won't have to wait until October 11 before being eligible . . . And don't blame these guys for failing the subject, we had a hard time spelling it.

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: Spirit. God, has created all in and of Himself. Spirit never created matter. There is nothing in Spirit out of which matter could be made, for, as the Bible declares, without the Logos, the Aeon or Word of God, 'was not anything made that was made.' Spirit is the only substance, the invisible infinite God" (p. 334.)

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—She looks as a ballerina should look. That's Tamora Toumonova, prima ballerina of the Monte Carlo ballet. She is Russian. She is vividly dark. She is 22.

But when I saw her she was sneaking through the corridor of the Meurice hotel, half frightened, murmuring "Moura" . . . "Moura" . . . "Come to me my precious Moura." . . .

But Moura had her thoughts on the hotel roof and scampered annoyingly out of reach and up the stairs.

Toumonova tossed her dark curls indignantly. (You always address a prima ballerina by her last name. I don't know why, but you do.)

I seem to have neglected identifying Moura. Moura is a seven-year-old Persian-Angora cat that has travelled the world and back again and loves it. But she has a yen for prowling in the sun on top of the hotel roof, and escapes the moment anyone opens the door.

The dance critics in New York agree that Toumonova is tops, and I won't try to add to the critical valentines they wrote about her in her most recent metropolitan appearances.

I WOULD rather tell you something about the girl herself, who, like the actor Paul Lukas, was born on a railroad train. . . . This was during the Revolution and "Mother was escaping through Siberia, and there I was," she explains. They were escaping from the Bolsheviks and they wound up in Paris, where, before she was six, Toumonova had begun her career in the ballet.

She said some very strange things for a young girl to say. . . . She said, "I think the happiest time of my life was when I was around 12, but I was not at all happy when I was 15 or anytime after that until I was almost 20."

I told her I thought this was most extraordinary because from 15 on most young girls are just beginning to meet boys and go out and have a good time.

"I was too old too young," she said. "I must have been 20 when I was 12. But that is all right. As I grow older now, I shall grow younger, like my mother. We are from the south of Russia, and when you are from the south of Russia you grow younger as you grow older."

• • •

THAT was a comforting thought, and as I am from the South myself, but of the U. S., I could almost feel the years fall away from my now reasonably ancient frame.

Toumonova gives herself just six years more as ballerina of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. "Then I will absolutely get married in a hurry or I will be 28 and that is enough ballet."

She had not the slightest inkling as to the young man. . . . "Probably somebody I've never even seen. . . . But I will tell you this . . . It will be an American. I will not marry a Russian. It wouldn't go, not with my temperament."

So there it is, you young bucks, and don't say you weren't tipped off. Right now Toumonova is on the road with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. . . . She goes from Texas to California and back again, and up through New England and Canada. . . . She has coal black hair that divides in the middle and dangles beneath her chin. Her birthday is March 2. She weighs 106, is five feet four. She adores Persian cats and likes Americans. Further than this, decent knoweth not.

CAPITAL GOSSIP

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — One of the duties of the departments of government is to keep the President informed. When any vital issue arises, the experts go into high and grind away on statistics and knowledge until they have turned out a clear summary and their best conclusions. Often, it is from such memorandums of fact and probabilities that the policy of the United States is shaped.

Such a matter of vital importance arose when Germany marched on Russia. The experts went into their huddles and, from authorities on labor, agriculture, economics, political activity, industry and military and naval affairs, went memos to be stacked on the President's desk.

As nearly as I can find out, only one expert, out of all the score or more, even closely approximated the course of the Russian-German war so far. All the rest said, in effect, that the Nazis would do just what they said they would do, and in record time—annihilate the Russian armies and take everything they wanted short of the Volga river.

But this one fellow (I can't disclose his name) figured it differently. Roughly, his conclusions were that the Germans first would win smashing victories, that somewhere this side of the Ural mountains or in them, the Nazi war machine would slow down and stall, and that ultimately the Russians would win the war.

Saw Russians As Russians

"EVEN his timing erred in favor of the Germans and of course now right he is from here on in is with the future. But some of the steps by which he arrived at these conclusions are interesting.

In the first place, he believed that the Russian army was much better and more effectively mechanized than anybody suspected. The Russians, for years, had been positive that some day they would have to fight the Germans and they were not lulled into passivity by Hitler's overtures of friendship and cooperation. They expected attack and they built up and trained their army to meet it.

He buttressed this reason with an observation about Russian morale—namely that the Russians are Russians first and anything else (including Communists) afterwards. They might be Georgians, Ukrainians, White Russians or Siberians; pro-Stalin or anti-Stalin; but once the invader set foot on their soil, they would be Russians.

He argued, in opposition to some of his cronies, that there would be no defection in the Ukraine. Reports of what had happened to some of their relatives in Poland would convince the Ukrainians that the Nazis would never leave their rich resources and their factories in their hands, he thought. Besides, he said, the only strong opposition leader to Stalin in the Ukraine committed suicide two years ago, leaving a note that the fight was useless.

The final important argument of this expert was that the Germans had failed to compute the risks by the cube root. He meant by this that the German transport problem in attack was far greater than the Russian one in retreat—that the Germans would have to create an endless belt of supplies and reinforcements on a vaster scale and for far greater distances than they ever had before. It would be failing to grasp the enormity of a transport problem, the like of which the world had never faced, he said.

Allowed For More Speed

THIS man figured that the initial German drive would go farther and faster than it has. He even thought the Nazis would be in Moscow by now, perhaps even have the Ukraine. On this score even he has been surprised—but not as surprised as all those who foretold complete Russian collapse in six weeks.

I must point out that the main body of opinion here still holds with the other experts—not without my one dissenter. It's just interesting that there was one person to know that his conclusions and arguments went to the President's desk almost in full and that on some major points, his observations so far are holding against all the others.

power party" was partly annihilated and partly encircled in a surprise thrust.

This is on the central front some 200 miles from Moscow, but south of the main route to the capital.

Next the regular communique placed the location of this reported entrapment at Roslavl.

It also reported capture of Korosten, important junction on a subsidiary railway line about 80 miles northwest of Kiev, and south of the Pinsk marshes.

Adding these claims to last night's special announcement of a deep penetration of the lower Ukraine which by-passed Kiev to the south, the High Command had announced within about 14 hours the capture of 141,000 prisoners on two major fronts.

A communique last night announced the destruction of 25 Russian divisions and the capture of 103,000 prisoners.

The Russians suffered more than 200,000 casualties, the announcement said, and vast quantities of equipment fell into German hands, including 317 tanks, 858 guns, more than 5,250 vehicles and several loaded railway trains.

The High Command spoke of the victory as "the first great success" in the Ukraine, and German correspondents at the front predicted that Marshal Semeon M. Budyenny's army of the southwest would be smashed completely in a great impending battle of the Dnieper plateau.

Dnepropetrovsk, at the great bend in the Dnieper some 250 miles southeast of Kiev, was reported already under the bomb sights of the luftwaffe.

Berlin, meanwhile, experienced its second air-raid alarm in as many nights, but an official announcement said planes attempting to attack the capital were beaten off without causing any damage. Two of the raiders were reported downed.

(British sources credited the raid to Soviet bombers, which an announcement in Moscow said had made the Thursday night attack. The British said their planes raided northwestern Germany last night but did not attempt to approach the capital).

The great victory in the Ukraine announced by the High Command last night apparently was the result of an encircling movement which began July 12.

German ground forces, supported by the luftwaffe, were said to have swung to the south after the break-through while other Nazi and Rumanian units struck northward from the Dniester to catch the Russians in a trap.

The Russians apparently put up their stiffest resistance at Uman, 125 miles south of Kiev and about 225 miles due west of Dnepropetrovsk. German war correspondents said entire villages ringing this area were razed in the fighting, during which the troops alternately were drenched by cloudbursts and parched by intense heat.

CHUNGKING HAS TWO AIR RAID WARNINGS

Chungking, China, Aug. 9—(AP)—Japanese air raiders made three attacks on Chungking today, holding this capital under alarms totaling more than nine and a half hours between last midnight and 3:30 p. m.

They came in two main waves, plastering the city hardest during a raid which began at 11:35 a. m. and lasted until 3:25 p. m.

The alarm sounded again only about an hour and a half after the all-clear had ended the second raid and sent the populace scurrying back below ground.

They constituted the 26th series of air raids on Chungking since March 4th, the opening of what the Chinese call the "bombing season."

RICKETTS GLENN VISIT OF OFFICIALS PLEASES

Wilkes-Barre, Aug. 9—(AP)—Governor James and his secretary of forests and waters praised the beauty of Ricketts Glenn today and expressed eagerness to acquire the 13,000-acre virgin tract as a state park.

The legislature appropriated $150,000 to purchase the land, owned by the Col. William R. Ricketts estate, in Luzerne, Wyoming and Sullivan counties.

James and Secretary G. Albert Stewart headed a party of officials and persons interested in acquiring the land through the proposed park.

M'KEES ROCKS PLANT HALTED BY DISPUTE

Pittsburgh, Aug. 9—(AP)—A Federal conciliator today attempted to mediate a jurisdictional dispute among rival unions which halted operations at the McKees Rocks plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company yesterday.

Work ceased following a walkout by the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which demands recognition as bargaining agency. The Independent Association of Car and Foundry Workers has an exclusive bargaining contract with the company which was approved by the National Labor Relations Board.

last night in a second successive attack. Berlin radio broadcasts heard in London said the raiders were beaten off and identified them tentatively as British, but the British said their pilots had not been near the German capital during the night.)

A mid-day Russian communique declared fighting continued throughout the night with the key sectors unchanged. Battles were reported raging on the Karelian isthmus north of Leningrad, on the Estonian front, near Smolensk, and in the Bel Tserkov sector of the Ukraine, with patrol activity and minor local actions elsewhere.

A Moscow war bulletin on fighting yesterday named Korosten, 80 miles northwest of Kiev, as a battle center after several days during which that area had not been mentioned by the Red Army.

Elsewhere the Soviet picture of the front was the same as it has been for days: With fighting at Kakisalmi, on the Karelian isthmus 75 miles north of Leningrad; on the Estonian front, near Smolensk on the road to Moscow, and near Bel Tserkov, center of resistance against the big Nazi push south of Kiev.

The Russians said their air fleet — which German communiques have pictured as virtually shattered—smashed heavily at German troops and panzer columns along the front, and raided the luftwaffe's airdromes far behind the lines.

FATE OF VICTIMS OF ZAMZAM IS REVEALED

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—The German government informed the United States today that two Americans whose fate has been a mystery since the sinking of the Egyptian steamer ZamZam were still aboard the Nazi raider which sank her.

The ZamZam was sunk by the raider Tamesis 115 days ago and the United States government asked for information about the two, Francis Vicovari of New York City, co-leader of a British-American ambulance unit, and Ned Laughinghouse, Wilson, N. C., tobacco man.

Bot hwere injured in the ZamZam incident and were not transferred to the German transport Dresden, as were other Zamzam passengers. Where the Tamesis—and the two Americans—are now was not disclosed.

PRESIDENT IS BUSY WORKING ON PAPERS

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—President Roosevelt spent most of yesterday working on official papers, the Navy Department announced in a dispatch from the presidential yacht Potomac.

The dispatch said: "Cruise uneventful and weather continues fair. President spent most the day working on official papers. Potomac and Calypso moved close inshore today and received fuel, water and provisions."

There was no reference to the position of the yacht and the coast guard cutter Calypso, but previous dispatches reported the party was off the New England shore enjoying cool breezes and fishing.

MARKET PRICES STILL DECLINE

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—Taxes and war doubts persisted as anti-bullish arguments in today's stock market and leading industrials added fractions to 2 points to recent losses.

Negative comfort was derived from the fact selling never seemed really urgent. Transfers for the two hours were around 350,000 shares.

The direction was downward from the start and few recoveries were in sight at the close. It was the eleventh straight session in which the list, on average, had made no progress. This was one of the longest stale-mates in a decade.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Wheat prices fell about a cent a bushel and corn sagged fractionally today as the grain market absorbed week-end profit taking and sales to adjust accounts. Scattered moisture was reported in some parts of the corn belt but there was no general relief from the dry spell.

Opening ½-1¼ lower, September $1.11 ⅝-¼, December $1.14⅞-⅝, wheat later held near this range. Corn started unchanged to ⅛ off, September 78½, December 82-81⅞.

TENANTS ON STRIKE AGAINST RENT BOOST

Philadelphia, Aug. 9—(AP)—Eighty-six tenants of homes owned by the Shetzline estate in South Philadelphia have proclaimed a strike against a $3 rent boost and threaten to picket their landlord unless the increase is cancelled.

Women of the neighborhood signed petitions addressed to President Roosevelt, city council and the estate manager, declaring they could not afford to pay the higher rents because "our husbands are not defense workers."

KENDALL BUYS BRADFORD OIL REFINING PLANT

At a public aution held yesterday in Bradford, the Kendall Refining Company bought the Foster Brook Refinery of the Bradford Oil Refining Company for $305,000 after spirited competition from the Pennzoil Company, of Oil City.

The sale was conducted by Attorney Jack J. McDowell, representative of the bondholders and trustees of the closed plant. Sterns Marshall, president of the Citizens National Bank of Bradford and individual bondholders' trustee, ordered the auction.

Following the purchase, J. B. Fisher, executive vice president of the Kendall company, said his concern was interested chiefly in development of specialty products from Pennsylvania and from the standpoint of light oil storage.

"The amount of employment depends on developments in the special field," he said.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 13
Kitchen Knife

CAROL brushed the brandy glass away. "They thought it was me in that big black wrap. I would have been there, where she was, in a minute. It was almost as if I killed her, letting her wear my wrap."

"Don't talk stuff, Carol," I said. "It wasn't your fault that she leaned against that scenery and messed up her own jacket."

Carol said, her lips quivering: "And then when I saw her . . . I laughed! I stood there and laughed!"

Jeff took her roughly by the arm. "Drink this. Or do I have to hit you again?"

Carol tipped back the glass and drained it. Her hand went limply down on the table and the glass rolled across the top, stopping with a clink against the china book end. She watched it for a moment, then turned toward the bedroom. I started to follow her but Jeff caught me by the hand, holding me back. "Let her alone."

I sank down beside him on the studio couch. My eyes were burning with a tired ache, my whole body felt cold, somehow, and detached. Jeff was looking hard at the door through which Carol had gone.

"Jeff who did it?"

Jeff quirked an eyebrow. "Do you think I know?"

"You know something. You listened to them talking. The police, I mean. I didn't. I tried, but I couldn't. They talked in circles."

"They were going in circles."

"But they must know something, they have something to go on. It isn't like the poisoning. They have the knife. . . ."

"The knife came from the kitchen. Tom Neilson recognized it at once; he saw it in the cabinet drawer the first day of rehearsals at the Colony. He hasn't noticed it since, nobody has. Anybody could've sneaked it out of the drawer, any time. No," he went on quickly as I opened my mouth, "no fingerprints. Wiped off clean."

"But they must have some idea . . . about someone . . ."

"The only idea they have is who didn't do it. That's as far as they can get."

"Who do they think didn't do it"

"You. You were on stage. Ben Kerry. He was on stage."

"That couldn't be all!"

"Not quite. Carol's eliminated."

"Of course."

"I mean she has an alibi because Peterson and I were with her from the moment she left the stage until you screamed."

I said in disgust: "Those three eliminations are a lot of help. Nobody else?"

"Listen, Haila. There were twenty-seven people people backstage tonight when Eve North was murdered. They say nobody came in and nobody went out. Twelve stage-hands, six people in the cast, Alice McDonald, Tommy Neilson and Phoebe, Clint Bowers, and the doorman, Eve North's maid and Peterson, Sullavan and I. You and Kerry and Carol are out. The detectives and I are out. Nobody else."

"Eve North is out," I reminded him.

"Yeah, and that leaves twenty. Tommy Neilson brought the curtain down the second you screamed. So he was near the rope at the other side of the stage from Eve. But he has no witnesses to his movements between the time of Eve's exit and your scream. Phoebe Thompson was on that side of the stage, but even she can't check on Tommy. She says she was standing in the wings with her eyes glued on you, trying to think of some line to throw you to get you out of the mess. Kerry had stuck you in, and she didn't see Tommy, didn't know he was there until he lowered the curtain. And Tommy can't check on Phoebe, so neither of them has an alibi."

Fifteen Suspects

"WHAT about Sullavan? He was on that side of the stage."

"Sullavan's no help. In the dark he couldn't tell Steve Brown from Phoebe in her slacks. There were twenty-seven people moving about backstage. Nobody can remember when or where they saw anyone else. Peterson nearly went nuts before he realized that this was one murder that wasn't going to be solved by placing people at the time of the crime."

"But, Jeff, there must be some alibis!"

"Not enough of them to help much. Five of the stage-hands were in the basement and they alibi each other."

"And where were the rest?"

"Around someplace. At the light switch, in the prop room, on the stairs into the basement. No alibis. Bowers was sitting on that pile of first act furniture in back of the set, and he saw people moving about. But that's all they were, just people, no specific persons. It was too dark. He thinks he saw Amelia coming out of the kitchen when you screamed, but he isn't even sure of that."

"What about the rest of the cast, Jeff?"

"Well, Philip Ashley was in his room on the third floor making a change. Alice's room is next to his and she was in it, but that doesn't give either of them an alibi unfortunately for she had her door closed and was 'wrapped up' in a script. Neither of them saw or heard the other. Steve was in his dressing room too, on the second floor, but Kerry has the room next to his and Kerry was on stage. So that leaves Steve minus an alibi."

"Stop, Jeff, I'm dizzy."

"You and me too. And Peterson. He finally ended up with fifteen suspects. And I'm adding another one for good measure."

"Who?"

"Greeley Morris."

"But he wasn't at the theater, Jeff!"

"Nobody saw him at the theater, you mean."

"But the doors were guarded!"

"Right. But the first chance I get I'm going to find out where and how he spent the evening."

"It was quite an evening!"

I went to the table and poured another drink. The Scotch was begining to tingle through my cold insides and fuzz over the sharp ache behind my eyes. I shot some soda out of the siphon and stirred it noisily.

"Jeff, her back and arms. Eve's, I mean. What was it?"

"Burns."

"From long ago?"

"From very long ago. More than twenty years. A theater fire in Detroit."

"Are they . . . are they as terrible as they seemed to me?"

"Yes. Pretty awful."

"And yet no one knew?"

"No. Amelia told us. Eve had been such a beautiful woman. She could never reconcile herself to the fact that her neck and arms and back were ruined. Instead of getting over it or used to it she only became more sensitive as the years went on. She was still going to skin specialists, taking treatments all over the country. She was going now to someone in Philadelphia, going twice a week. That's the mysterious errand she was on this morning."

"And that was why she took Carol's wrap?"

Man In The Hall

HE nodded. "She must have leaned against that scenery, and then, realizing what she had done, whipped off her jacket to see the damage. There was a lot; the back of her jacket is thick with the stuff. I don't suppose she thought there would be time to get another wrap from her dressing room. Carol's cloak was there on the banister, almost beside her, and she must have thrown it on and stood there waiting for her cue. It was then that she got it. It was a pretty easy mistake. They're about the same height, the same build."

I said, thinking back over all the times I had seen Eve North on the stage and off: "She always wore such high-necked dresses and long flowing sleeves. I thought it was an affectation and really . . ."

"Yes. She lived in dread of being discovered. I think Amelia was probably very right. Eve North would rather have been killed than stared at."

"Poor Eve," I said.

I hadn't heard any sound from the bedroom nor the opening of the door, and I almost leaped when my eyes fell on Carol standing quietly in the doorway bundled up in my terry cloth bathrobe.

"I can't sleep and it's worse in there alone. May I . . . do you think I could have another brandy?"

I was at the liquor cabinet pouring it for her when a soft sly pecking sounded at the door. Jeff turned sharply and we watched him with apprehension as he moved to open it.

He had only pulled it a cautious inch before Jinx pushed his way in, closed and locked the door behind him and faced us, his eyes bulging.

"There's a man out in the hall!" he whispered.

"No!"

"Yes! He's been settin' on the steps for an hour. Should I call the cops?"

"Why?"

"I just read in the papers about the murder. This guy looks suspicious. He might be the one after Miss Blanton."

"Don't be silly, Jinx," I said.

"Awright, what's he settin' there for?"

"Have you spoken to him?"

"Not since I read about the murder. When he first come in I spoke to him. I asked him what he wanted. He said he wanted a little farm on Long Island."

"Is he drunk?" Jeff asked.

"Not so's I could notice, Mr. Troy."

"Did you ask him who he was?"

"He said he was Admiral Byrd. But he ain't, I seen pictures of Admiral Byrd."

"Jeff," I said, "you go talk to him."

"I don't want to talk to him."

"Please."

Jeff stepped into the hall and shouted, "Hey, you!"

McKenney On Bridge

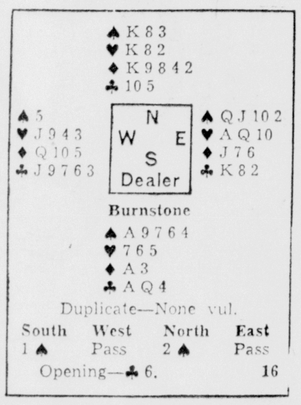

VETERAN SCENTS TROUBLE IN OBVIOUS PLAY FOR GAME

BY WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

The world's leading Master Point holder until a few months ago, D. Bruce Burnstone had practically dropped out of bridge. When he heard, however, that our party was coming to the coast, he made a date by wire to play with Waldemar von Zedtwitz in the All-Western masters pair event.

Never having met the players participating in the event, I thought the pair made a nice showing when they finished third. Later in the week, Burnstone, with Lou Mathe, Meyer Scheifer, and Roscoe A. Puffer, won the All-Western team-of-four championship. This victory may eventually put Burnstone back in the lead as the holder of the greatest number of Master Points.

In my opinion Burnstone was always one of the greatest match point players in the country. Certainly his team, the Four Aces, has won more team-of-four championships than any other team. Today's hand helped Burnstone and his teammates win the All-Western team event.

Duplicate—None vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

Opening—♣ 6. 16

The ace of clubs won the king. Burnstone (South) cashed the ace and king of diamonds and then led a third diamond to ruff in his own hand. When the diamonds split, Burnstone realized the board might already have been lost through his conservatism in the bidding.

He decided that the other team would probably reach game. Hence all he could hope for was to find a bad break in spades, and the neart ace over the king—else four spades would be a lay-down.

The play for game would be to cash the ace of spades, lead low to the king and cash diamonds. Burnstone deliberately avoided this line. He cashed the queen of clubs and ruffed out his loser. Then he cashed the king of trumps and started leading diamonds. East ruffed at once and Burnstone overruffed, then led a trump.

East could take his two trumps and ace of hearts, but could not prevent declarer from winning two more tricks. Thus Burnstone made four. The other team lost the game but went down one.

REDS INDICATE LINES HOLDING DESPITE GERMAN CLAIMS

HITLER COMMUNIQUE SAYS SOVIET LOSSES NOW TOTAL 341,000

By the Associated Press

Germans report 141,000 Russians captured, over 200,000 killed and wounded in new smashes at Moscow and Ukraine fronts; Nazi high command asserts two Red armies wiped out, third partly destroyed south of Kiev; Soviet high command notes bitter all-night fighting, says key sectors unchanged; Red warplanes bomb Berlin on second successive night; Swiss reports say Russian resistance forces Hitler to revamp time-table in 49-day-old campaign.

RAF bombers leave great fires raging at Kiel, German naval base; other RAF raiders attack Hamburg, London reports; luftwaffe bombs English airports.

British warships convoy huge war stores to Middle East for "next forward drive."

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Berlin radio said today that one squadron alone of Germany's big Junkers transport planes had brought 80,000 wounded German soldiers back from the central sector of the eastern front, NBC reported. Never before, said the broadcast heard here by NBC, has the German supply stream been subjected to such a strain as in the campaign against Soviet Russia. The transport planes, it said, took more than 2,500,000 kilos—2,750 tons—of war material to the front on outgoing flights and flew the wounded to the rear for medical care on the return trip.

MOSCOW

Moscow, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Red army declared today that heavy losses had been inflicted on 10 more German divisions—six tank and four infantry—in a battle on the eastern front.

Red Star, the army organ, said intercepted German sanitary service messages showed the following losses among the German divisions:

111th infantry—20 per cent.
7th tank—30 per cent.
56th, 297th and 299th infantry 40 per cent.
11th, 13th, 14th and 16th tank—per cent.
18th tank—tremendous.

(On a basis of 15,000 men to a German infantry division and 12,000 men to a German tank division, the Red Army figures indicate casualties of roughly 50,000 men.)

These losses, the Red Star said, were in addition to the numbers of Nazi infantry, tank and mechanized divisions previously reported smitten.

Its report followed a belated announcement of the first Russian bombing of Berlin.

The announcement that fires were started in Berlin by Russian planes on reconnaissance deep inside Germany cleared away the mist of the mystery surrounding a raid on the Nazi capital Thursday night which the Germans attributed to the British.

London reported the Red air fleet made the 1,200-mile round-trip to the German capital again

PREMIER MUSSOLINI BURIES SECOND SON

Predappio, Italy, Aug. 9.—(AP) Premier Mussolini buried his second-born son, Bruno, today in a little cemetery of San Cassiano in Pennio near the graves of the Duce's blacksmith father and school-teacher mother.

The body was brought here yesterday from Pisa where the 23-year-old air captain was killed Thursday in the crash of an experimental warplane.

BERLIN

By the Associated Press

Berlin, Aug. 9—A total claim of 341,000 Russians killed, wounded or captured by new German strokes on central and southern sectors of the eastern front emerged today in three closely spaced communiques from the Hitler headquarters.

This claim, at the end of the seventh week of the Germans' grand offensive, was elaborated by the assertion that 25 Russian divisions had been destroyed—two whole armies and part of a third, deep in the Ukraine.

The supreme commanders of the 12th and sixth Russian armies were reported among the prisoners.

Tremendous quantities of war material were said to be among the loot caught within the tightened panzer circles.

Two communiques from Adolf Hitler's headquarters announced today destruction of trapped Soviet deefnders of Roslavl, 60 miles southeast of Smolensk, the capture of 38,000 prisoners there and the seizure of the rail town of Korosten, one of the northwestern gates to Kiev.

First a special communique listed the 38,000 prisoners and quantities of weapons which, it said, were captured below Smolensk, where the High Command three days ago reported "a new enemy

GENERAL WEYGAND IN VICHY FOR MEETINGS

Vichy, Unoccupied France, Aug. 9.— (AP) —Generalissimo Maxime Weygand, Vichy's proconsul in North Africa, conferred today with Chief of State Marshal Petain, Vice Premier Darlan and other government leaders in a rapid-fire round of meetings preliminary to a late afternoon full dress cabinet meeting.

Informed circles said the discussion fitted in the framework of explanations given the United States on French imperial policy earlier in the week when France declared she would shape her policies alone because she alone would have to bear the consequences.

TAX PROGRAM IS CRITICIZED BY SEN. GEORGE

Chairman Predicts That the Senate Finance Committee Will Make a Substantial Increase in the $3,206,200,000 Bill

ALTERNATIVE PLANNED

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—While taking exception to some treasury suggestions for adding approximately $1,000,000,000 to the House-approved tax bill, Chairman George (D-Ga) predicted today the Senate finance committee would make a substantial increase in the $3,206,200,000 measure.

Although the figure approved by the House is the highest in history, George said that "we should raise at least $3,500,000,000, and as much more as we can justify without too great a jar to the economic system."

The Georgia senator told reporters the treasury proposal to increase the starting rate for surtaxes on individual incomes from 5 to 11 per cent would provide "an exceedingly high tax".

George indicated too, that the committee would reject Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau's proposal for a modified requirement that husbands and wives file joint income tax returns, when both earn income outside the home. The House struck out a joint return clause from the bill.

As an alternative, George suggested that all husbands and wives divide equally any income they might have and file separate returns—a system now followed in nine states having community property laws.

George endorsed the treasury recommendation for recruiting existing income tax exemptions from $2,000 to $1,500 for married per-

PENNA. TO HELP SAVE GASOLINE

Governor James Agrees to Name Liaison Officer to Study Federal Plans for Conserving Oil and Fuel Supplies and to Direct Pennsylvania's Cooperation Along Lines Suggested by LaGuardia

DIRECT APPEAL WILL BE MADE NEXT WEEK

Harrisburg, Aug. 9—(AP)—Governor James has agreed to name a liaison officer to study federal plans for conserving oil and gasoline supplies, and to direct the state's cooperation along these lines.

Dr. Arnaud C. Marts, director of Pennsylvania's Council of Defense, announced that the governor had given his approval to a two-fold plan for co-operation which an aid to National Oil Coordinator Harold L. Ickes had proposed to him in Washington.

Marts conferred with Ickes yesterday. Beside the liaison officer, the plan includes a direct appeal by Governor James, through federally paid full-page newspaper advertisements next week, urging Pennsylvanians to slash gasoline consumption one-third.

The liaison representative would spend two or three days in Washington next week obtaining the groundwork for a state-wide conservation plan.

Dr. Marts also met with Mayor La Guardia of New York, director of civilian defense, on co-operation between the federal agency and the state and local councils.

PRICE INCREASE IN MILK ORDERED AT PITTSBURGH

Harrisburg, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Milk Control Commission today directed a retail price increase in the Pittsburgh area from 13 to 14 cents a quart, and provided boosts to farmers from ten to 32 cents a 100 pounds, effective August 16.

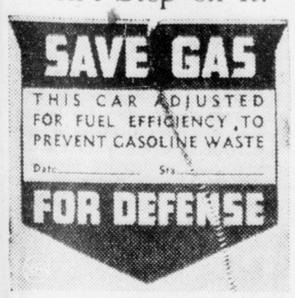

The 14-cent price on retail quarts to consumers applies to grade B, the most commonly used, but a one-cent jump is effective on all other grades.

"This compares with a retail doorstep delivery price in New York of 15½; New Jersey, 14-14½; Chicago, 14; the present price in Cincinnati, Cleveland and Detroit is 12 cents, but it is probable that they will move up to 13 cents for comparable winter prices," said the commission.

STATE SETS UP REGULATIONS TO GOVERN BANKS

Secretary John C. Bell Calls Upon Institutions Under Its Supervision to Exert Greater Effort to Dispose Of Real Estate Holdings

CRUCIAL TIMES AHEAD

Harrisburg, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The Pennsylvania banking department today called upon banks under its supervision to exert greater effort to dispose of real estate holdings.

Secretary John C. Bell Jr., made the plea in setting up regulations to strengthen the state's banking structure "to prepare for the approaching crucial times."

The department at the same time reported an increase of $183,056,997 in deposits during the year ended June 30, and a boost of nearly 67 millions in loans to business men which was considered an indication of business improvement.

Bell said real estate disposal was necessary to bring about more substantial compliance with the banking laws placing a time limit of five years upon the right to hold real estate acquired by foreclosure or otherwise in satisfaction of debts owing to the institutions.

This holding period has been extended three times, one year each time, under discretionary powers vested by law in the secretary of banking. Bell did not announce what action would be taken at expiration of the current extension on Nov. 30.

The secretary in his letter accompanying the new regulations said that real estate "has become a

Huge Shipyards at Kearny, N. J., Remain in Grip of CIO Strike While Union Official Who Announced Walkout Calls for Government Intervention "Without Another Hour's Delay" to Hasten Settlement

DELAYS WORK ON BIG CRUISER AND VESSELS

By the Associated Press

The huge shipyards of the Federal Shipbuilding and Drydock Company at Kearny, N. J., remained in the grip of a CIO strike today, while the union official who announced the walkout called for the government to take over the plant "without another hour's delay."

Peter Flynn, vice president of Local 16, Industrial Union of Marine and Shipbuilding Workers of America, urged government intervention last night a few hours after Ralph A. Bard, acting secretary of the navy, warned that steps would be taken to get production resumed unless there was a quick settlement.

The company has $493,000,000 worth of defense orders. Seventeen thousand workers have been idle since Thursday.

"We believe," said Flynn in a statement, "the government should step in without another hour's delay. With the union's collective bargaining rights fully protected under government operation, the picket line will instantly become a marching line of American work-

GREAT QUANTITY WHEAT STORED AT KANSAS CITY

Kansas City, Aug. 9—(AP)—Railroads clamped an embargo on wheat shipped to Kansas City elevators for storage, but that didn't stump Kansas and Missouri farmers.

They hauled out carpenter tools and constructed hundreds of new bins and renovated old farm buildings. Many such storage facilities were erected even before the harvest started by far-sighted operators. With cash market and government loan prices flirting with dollar-plus figures, they refused to chance weather loss by dumping valuable grain on the ground.

With the 1941 winter harvest virtually completed, a survey disclosed today that with the exception of the Garden City, Kas., area, where a small amount was so stored, no wheat was piled on the ground in Kansas this year, as in years past.

Although a majority of public elevators are nearly filled, the survey showed an acute storage problem is practically non-existent in the two states. Besides the farmers' own bins, a small but constant movement of wheat into consumptive channels and a disappointing yield in some areas has helped the storage situation.

Railroads, mindful of defense program needs and wary of tying up their cars with wheat, placed the embargo in effect July 14. Receipts at Kansas City immediately dropped to less than 500 cars a day from a daily run of between 1,000 and 2,000 cars. Yesterday only 151 cars were received.

NOTABLES COMING ON PAN AMERICAN CLIPPER

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—Pan American Airways said today that Alfred Duff Cooper, former British minister of information, and 27 other passengers left Lisbon in the Atlantic Clipper early this morning and would arrive here tomorrow afternoon.

Duff Cooper, en route to Singapore as a special war coordinator for the British cabinet, was accompanied by his wife, Lady Diana Manners. Other passengers were John Wheeler Bennett, head of the British Press Service, and Jaime Arango, minister to the court of St. James's.

The plane left Lisbon at 3:54 a. m. (EST) and an hour later the American Clipper followed her with 33 passengers en route to New York.

BITTER DEBATES SPLIT LEADERS IN CIO CONVENTION

Torn by Arguments on Allis-Chalmers and North American Aviation Walkouts Earlier This Year Leaders Await Return of Committee

GROUP REFUSES SEATS

Buffalo, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—The UAW-CIO's sixth national convention, split by bitter debates on alleged Communistic leadership of two defense industry strikes, awaited today a special report expected to intensify the factional clashes.

The United Automobile, Aircraft and Agricultural Implement Workers—torn by arguments on the Allis-Chalmers and North American Aviation walkouts earlier this year—anticipated return of a three-man committee the convention had sent to Milwaukee to conduct a new delegate election at the Allis-Chalmers local.

At the start of the turbulent sessions this week delegates refused to seat the Milwaukee group of 10 on grounds they were elected unconstitutionally. Rejection of the delegation representing 8,000 workers came amid accusations by high union leaders that Communists led the 79-day Allis-Chalmers strike.

UAW-CIO President R. J. Thomas said yesterday he understood the Milwaukee local "refused to cooperate" in holding a new vote and that, therefore, the committee was returning, leaving the Wisconsin plant without convention representation.

Verbal battles over leadership of the five-day North American plane plant strike at Inglewood, Calif., also marked yesterday's session. Delegates rejected a grievance committee report which declined

Democratic House Leaders Virtually Abandon Hope Of Passing Legislation Providing Indefinite Extension and Seek to Salvage From Mounting Opposition an 18-Months Plan Already Approved In Senate

NEITHER SIDE WILL AGREE TO COMPROMISE

Washington, Aug. 9 — (AP)—Some Democratic house leaders virtually abandoned hope today of passing legislation providing indefinite extension of army service, and sought to salvage from mounting opposition an 18-months extension already approved by the Senate.

Informed sources said a careful poll showed the existence of a working combination of Republicans and Democrats which could easily defeat the pending House bill to remove the present one-year time limit for service of Selectees, National Guardsmen and Reservists.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—(AP)—DNB said sharp dogfighting occurred over the English channel today as British planes tried to enter German-occupied territory between Calais and Boulogne. First reports indicated eight Spitfires and one German plane were shot down, the agency said.

Adelaide, Australia, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Australian cabinet ministers, it was reported today, have been advised to stand by for an emergency meeting—perhaps on Monday. Prime Minister Robert G. Menzies, now touring the commonwealth, said that calling a meeting depended upon international developments.

London, Aug. 9.—(AP)—New naval and artillery contingents from Newfoundland have arrived at a west coast port, the Dominions office announced today.

Cairo, Egypt, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Eleven persons were killed and seven others injured but only slight property damage was caused in an Axis air raid last night on the Suez Canal zone, an official announcement said today.

B. I. PROBING DETROIT BLAST

Detroit, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Federal Bureau of Investigation agents and Detroit police launched an inquiry today into the cause of an explosion which turned the Canadian oil tanker Transiter into an inferno and cost two persons their lives.

Five minutes after the 180-foot diesel-powered vessel left port late yesterday afternoon laden with 80,000 gallons of gasoline bound for Canada the tanker exploded and burst into flames on the River Rouge.

Police searched the waters for the bodies of Mrs. Elida Tremblay, 46, of Murray Bay, Que., wife of the captain, and Roger Lachette, 24, a deckhand, survivors related a tale of heroism. Flames leaping about him, Captain Rudolph Tremblay, they said, swung the ship in a wide arc to prevent it from drifting downstream and endangering oil docks along the shore. It nosed in the river near the American Agricultural Company.

Bern, Switzerland, Aug. 9—(AP) —Red Army resistance has forced the German High Command to revamp its time-table for the Russian campaign, but the Nazis still hope for a sweeping victory by the end of September, information reaching here from foreign military observers in Berlin indicated today.

The September goal calls for occupation of Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev and an advance to the Caucasus mountains, these observers reported. Subsequently the program was said to call an an advance to the Urals and establishment of a defense line there.

Originally, Adolf Hitler's plans envisioned capture of Leningrad three weeks after the campaign began and the fall of Moscow soon after, it was said. By the end of August, the Germans and their Axis allies were to have reached Astrakhan on the Caspian Sea, 1,700 miles southeast of Berlin, the information declared.

Completion of the new schedule, the information said, would mean:

1. Germany will set up a defense line from Lake Ladoga in the north to the Volga river east of Moscow, thence south on the west bank of that river to Astrakan.

2. Turkey will be asked in October for free passage of German

DAVIS TRIAL IS NEARING FINISH

Philadelphia, Aug. 9—(AP)—The second trial of retired U. S. Circuit Court Judge J. Warren Davis and former Bankruptcy Referee Morgan S. Kaufman may reach a federal jury of nine men and three women late next week.

This was indicated with announcement of prosecutor Walter H. Gahagan that he expected to rest his case soon after the trial is resumed Monday. Defense Counsel William A. Gray said his testimony would require three days.

The government closed its second week of testimony yesterday with an assertion from William E. Brown, Jr., former counsel for a trustee of the estate of one-time movie magnate William Fox, that the third circuit court of appeals delayed so long on one decision affecting the Fox bankruptcy he had to apply to the Supreme Court for action.

Davis and Kaufman are accused of conspiracy to obstruct justice and defraud the United States. Fox testified he gave the jurist $27,500

Annual August Meteor Shower Is Scheduled to Arrive Monday Night

BY HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The annual August meteor shower, the tears of St. Lawrence or perseid meteors, is due Monday night.

These are the metors which never have failed to appear for 1,110 years straight. They probably were visible in mid-summer long before that, but were recorded first in scientific records in 830 A. D.

Before midnight, look to the northeast to see them; after midnight, right overhead. They fall at a rate of about 30 an hour. Occasionally, a lucky spectator sees dozens in less than an hour.

They are shaped like tear drops, which is the reason the Irish long ago named them after St. Lawrence's tears. They are the safest, as well as the surest, of all meteor displays.

They are grains of dust, but traveling at about 40 miles a second they flash brilliantly as they consume in the friction of the upper air. They burn at about 60 miles altitude.

These bits of dust circle the sun in an ellipse so vast that the meteors take 108 years for a single circuit. They are supposed to be a continuous stream of meteor dust, whose width is estimated variously from 3,000,000 to 15,000,000 miles.

The earth sees them only in mid-

ENSIGNS GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Pensacola, Fla., Aug. 9—(AP)—Two ensigns at the Pensacola naval air station, convicted of involuntary manslaughter at a court-martial, are under prison sentences for their airplane's decapitation of Mrs. Robert Phillips.

Paul C. Brown of Chicago, pilot of the plane on a routine training flight, was sentenced yesterday to 24 months. His passenger, Joseph C. Thompson of Healdsburg, Calif., received a 12-month sentence. They also were convicted, under approval of President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Knox, on charges of conduct to the prejudice of good order and discipline, and, of carelessly endangering the lives of others.

Mrs. Phillips was killed March 24 while she worked in a turnip field near Robertsdale, Ala. Witnesses at the court martial testified that a plane similar to the ensigns' also swooped low over other fields in the Robertsdale vicinity.

The ensigns, dismissed from the air service, were taken to the navy prison at Portsmouth, N. H.

Vast Amount of Food and Fuel to Be Needed for Southern Maneuvers

HOSPITAL SHIP COMMISSIONED

New York, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The navy today commissioned the U. S. S. Solace, adding to the American fleet its first hospital ship since first World War days.

The Solace is the former 6,209-ton Clyde Mallory liner Iroquois. The navy bought her in July 1940, and since last September she has been undergoing conversion at the Athletic Basin Iron Works in Brooklyn.

The Iroquois was used by the government in October, 1939, to return American nationals from Britain by the way of Ireland.

The Solace was fitted as a modern 400-bed hospital which naval authorities said was as fully equipped as any similar sized hospital on land.

The shining white ship, bearing a green band and a Red Cross on each side colors prescribed for hospital ships by the Hague convention—was commissioned in brief ceremonies at the Iron Works pier in Brooklyn.

The navy's only other hospital ship is the USS Relief.

Camp Polk, La., Aug. 9.—(AP)—The army, giving up trying to imagine how much will be consumed by the men, animals and machines in the Louisiana maneuvers this summer began speaking today in terms of ships and trains but neglected to mention that everything went double.

A statement was issued declaring that "the amount of food, fuel, forage and equipment required for this fighting force is beyond human imagination but a breakdown to carload lots makes it conceivable."

The army figures were based on consumption by 250,000 men of the Third Army which maneuvers from mid-August to the end of September. But when this force is pitted against the Second Army there will be not 250,000 but 500,000 men in the field.

Contenting itself with facts and figures for a quarter of a million men, the army said:

In 55 days, the third army will eat 54,450 tons of food which includes 2,500,000 dozen eggs, 9,500,000 pounds of bread.

This tonnage, the army said would fill about a dozen average seagoing freighters or a line of railroad cars more than a mile long.

Horses and mules numbering 11,500—presumably this figure may

T. Semis Walmsley will come to Harrisburg Monday at the request of La Guardia. Dr. Marts said, to map details of the co-operation.

Aside from this, there were these other developments at the state capital:

1. State chairmen of the major parties reminded would-be voters that today is the last on which to register for the September 9 primary and appealed to soldiers to speed their registrations to home districts in order to be eligible.

2. The banking department announced an increase of $183,056,997 in deposits during the year ended June 30, and a boost of nearly 67 millions in loans to business men as an indication of business improvement.

3. Governor James, Stewart and dozen others tour beautiful Ricketts Glen, 13,000-acre virgin tract in Luzerne, Wyoming and Sullivan counties, and hope it can be added to state's park system.

4. The milk control commission increased the retail price on ordinary milk in Pittsburgh area from 13 to 14 cents a quart, and hints it may go higher this winter as a result of rising farm costs; similar one-cent increases already announced for Philadelphia and Erie areas.

Albany, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—Proposal by Owen D. Young, farmer and retired industrialist, that the federal government purchase dairy by-products at prices offsetting milk production cost today heartened dairymen awaiting outcome of their pleas for increased income.

Service Measure Hits Snag

limited service version of the controversial legislation—and Republican opponents declared they would not compromise either.

With important votes not scheduled until Monday, or possibly Tuesday, President Roosevelt's lieutenants took advantage of a week-end recess to buttonhole undecided members and urge the 18-months extension, and to select a man to offer that compromise.

The opposition based its stand on the ground that the national interest was no more imperilled now than a year ago when the selective service act was passed; that the government made a contract with the Selectees to keep them in uniform only a year; and that the army would not be disorganized—as President Roosevelt said it would—if they were not kept longer.

Representative Cox (D-Ga) and Smith (D-Va) argued that if the nation was not imperilled, Republicans and Democrats alike would not have voted so overwhelmingly for the defense program with its billions of dollars of appropriations.

"If anybody doubts that the national peril is involved," Smith asked, "what is all the shooting about? Why did we appropriate forty billion dollars for national defense?"

With this threatening situation before them, the sponsors of the bill were in fighting mood, and Chairman May (D-Ky) of the Military committee led off the debate with a vigorous speech in its favor.

He stated the Army's position on the issue: Unless there is an extension of service draftees, National Guardsmen and reservists—who make up a large proportion of the Army's officer personnel—must be mustered out, and the Army will disintegrate.

"The issue," he said, "is whether the Congress will go ahead with what it started to do last year when it passed the original (Selective Service) act."

It would be argued, he said, that the men were promised their discharge after a year of training, but:

"That isn't true. That isn't a fact. The Congress made no such promise, unless it was somebody seeking reelection to office who told his constituents that."

Rep. Fish (R-NY), the ranking Republican member of the Foreign Relations committee, told the House the bill was part of a "gigantic conspiracy" to involve the United States in the war.

ers rushing back to pick up where they left off one of the most vital jobs in the national defense program."

Flynn said his manifesto was issued "merely as a statement of policy so that the general public may know the union's attitude." He said he had not communicated with any government agency.

The union said it called the strike to back up demands for what it said was a modified union shop as recommended by the defense mediation board. The management declared a closed shop was asked and rejected the provision in a proposed work contract.

Under construction at the plant are two cruisers, six destroyers, three tankers and a number of cargo vessels. In addition the company has orders for five other cruisers, 21 additional destroyers and a number of merchant vessels.

The navy department's warning issued by Bard said "if management and labor cannot arrive at a settlement, steps must be taken which will in one way or another put this huge shipbuilding plant back into production at the earliest possible moment."

On another defense front a non-union walkout of several hundred workmen at the Curtiss-Wright Corporation propeller division plant at Caldwell, N. J., threatened to stop production on defense orders exceeding $100,000,000. The plant employs 1,493 workers.

Frank Sherwood, head of a workers committee which asked a general 20 per cent hourly wage increase in undisclosed scales, with a base rate of 75 cents hourly, said the walkout was not a union move nor a protest against a collective bargaining election held Thursday which was won by an independent union.

The company rejected the demand and said that Propeller Craft, the union which won the election, was the proper agency to make any requests.

Pittsburgh had a new strike and a threat of another next Monday. The McKees Rocks plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company, employing about 2,500, closed after the CIO Steel Workers called a walkout in a jurisdictional dispute with an independent local union which has been recognized by the National Labor Relations Board as exclusive bargaining agency at the plant. About 5,000 white collar salaried employes of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company threatened to strike Monday for a $10 a month increase in all salary brackets and a 6 2/3 per cent raise for employes who work only 40 hours a week. Present scales were not revealed.

Philadelphia, Aug. 9—(AP)—A work stoppage which has "seriously delayed" projects at the Philadelphia navy yard was revealed today by navy spokesmen, who said 348 men are involved.

A statement issued at the yard, where big units of the two-ocean navy are under construction, said the men stayed away from their jobs in protest of a general agreement for Atlantic seaboard shipyards providing time and a half for overtime and Saturday pay. They formerly received double time.

With Our Boys At Indiantown Gap

By F. L. FITZPATRICK

Indiantown Gap, Aug. 9.—(AP)—The ranks of Pennsylvania's 28th division have been depleted by 202 men—81 of whom entrained last night for Jefferson Barracks, Mo., for specialized training as members of the regular army air corps.

Captain Henry S. Matthews, Washington, D. C., post recruiting officer, disclosed that an additional 121 from the "Iron Division" will leave this encampment Monday for the southern air school. He said the quota from Indiantown Gap is 300, and declared that number will probably be reached by the middle of next week.

"I haven't noticed any effect on the rate of enlistments due to passage by the Senate of the extended service act," Capt. Matthews said. "I do not see why the extension should have any effect on such enlistments."

Knotty Indian Problem Confronts Government in Making Plans for Construction of Kinzua Reservoir

A knotty 20th century "Indian problem" will confront the federal government when Army engineers get a go-ahead signal for construction of the $35,700,000 dam and reservoir on the Allegheny river near Kinzua, it was pointed out today by William G. Smock, Pittsburgh Associated Press writer.

Although a bill authorizing the combined flood control and stream pollution project needs only President Roosevelt's signature to become law, appropriation of the necessary money is expected to be delayed until after the current national emergency.

When the money finally is appropriated by congress, the department of the interior will face the problem of what to do with several hundred Seneca and Cornplanter Indians on the Allegheny reservation in New York state and the Cornplanter Grant in Warren county.

At Harrisburg, State Secretary of Forests and Waters G. Albert Stewart said today he believed the project apparently is headed for the deferred list because of national defense expenditures.

"I think we'll have to lick the world first before they find the money for this project," said Stewart, in whose department is vested the authority to negotiate land purchases and options in connection with the flood control work.

Stewart said he thought the government would put off financing the Warren county project until the vast outlay of money for defense purposes slows up. President Roosevelt has indicated a backlog of such projects would be built up as a "cushion" against recession when the defense effort ends.

The Indians live on land, given them by treaty, which will become part of the huge 37-mile long reservoir. Their homes and fields will be flooded at intervals when the 152-foot high dam impounds flood water for gradual release.

Colonel D. Lee Hooper, of the U. S. Army Engineers Pittsburgh office, said preliminary survey work and project reports on the dam have been completed but that detailed construction plans and specifications would not be made until after he receives instructions from the secretary of war. The order will follow appropriation of necessary funds, it was pointed out.

Col. Hooper said he thought the problem of what to do with the Indians might delay start of construction even after the national emergency ends and other projects, now being held up, were begun.

It has been pointed out that about 900 Seneca Indians live on the Allegheny reservation, a tract of land extending from the New York state border to Salamanca, N. Y. On the Cornplanter Grant, given to the Indians by the state in 1791, are only about 40 persons. However, there are about 550 Indians in various parts of the country who have an interest in this land.

The reservoir would inundate only part of the Indian lands in New York state, but would completey erase the Cornplanters' 640 acres of bottom land.

Several years ago, the Cornplanters were given a chance by the state to move to the Blue Hole country in Fayette county but declined through Chief Windsor H. Pierce, great-great-grandson of Chief Cornplanter.

The Kinzua dam will drain the largest area and have the largest reservoir volume of any of the 10 flood control projects in the upper Ohio flood control system.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 11

Murder

CAROL had got through her big scene nicely and at her exit applause had started in the orchestra and thundered solidly through the whole house. I realized then that our audience was not as lethargic as we had supposed, but that suspense was hovering over them as well as us. They waited, as we were waiting, for the evening to end safely. That hand had been for Carol's courage as well as for her acting.

Through the wide French doors I could see her in the wings making toward the stairs, both Peterson and Jeff close at her heels. Almost two thirds over now, and Carol was still safe.

There were only Eve and old Ben Kerry and I on stage now, and in a moment Eve followed Carol through the door on stage right. Kerry lounged in the chair beside the big golden oak desk where I sat writing what was supposed to be a passionate love note. I scribbled, "Green Apples, Green Apples, Eve North in Green Apples" and rushed through my few lines with Kerry. He rose now, heavily, and with an avuncular pat on my shoulder started for the door.

The act was nearly over now, a little scene with Eve, then Carol's entrance and then the blessed respite of an intermission.

It was the half-smothered sound he made that caused me to look up from my desk and stare at old Ben Kerry and wonder hysterically if he had gone mad. Instead of exiting through the door right he had closed it softly and turned and taken one faltering step back into the room.

And then I saw his face.

For one terrifying moment I thought it wasn't Kerry's face at all. In spite of the florid make-up that he used, it had somehow the look of a plaster cast, numb and frozen. But his eyes darted wildly around the stage, stopping for a moment as they rested on me and seeing nothing.

I searched frantically for something to ad lib. "Back so soon?" rose inanely to my lips and I smothered it and could think of nothing else. I had to get the old man off the stage. Eve wouldn't make her entrance until I had.

I tried to catch his eye and motion toward the door. He stared at me and made no move to go. Silence pressed down in cold stiffling clouds over the house and then was stabbed by a titter in the audience.

I got out of my chair at last and took Kerry by the shoulders, turning him forcibly around to face the door. The titter spread to a running laugh, rolling through the audience, the balcony, the boxes. I said, trying to fight the laughter, "Good night, Uncle George," and in Kerry's ear I muttered, "For God's sake, get out!" I held the door open for him. It was then, I guess, I screamed.

Before I touched the shapeless mass on the floor at my feet, even before I saw the sharp glimmer of the knife beside it, I knew that she was dead. I knew from the way the thick velvet of the cape fell over her body and from the terrible stillness of it. I knew it and yet I screamed, "Carol, Carol!" and I tried to lift her.

I saw the jacket then, the shimmering white jacket that was splotched now with thick green stains and crumpled under her head. With feverish fingers I tore the big black cape from her shoulders. My arms went limp and numb with horror.

The back beneath the cape was hideously shriveled, the arms and shoulders a network of ancient brutal scars. Somehow I managed to put my hand under her head and turn it toward me. Eve North's dead eyes stared up into my face.

Aftermath Of Murder

IT was half past four when we left the theater. Carol sat between Jeff and me in the cab, her hands working spasmodically in her lap at the little ball of felt that had, much earlier in the evening, been a hat.

It was no good. If I could blot out Eve's face there would be Carol's. Not Carol now, white and tired, but Carol as she ran down from her dressing room when she heard my scream, and stopped and stood there above the grotesque figure in her velvet wrap.

I was crouching over Eve, staring up at Carol. I had waited for her to faint or to cry, but not to laugh. She had reached out her hand to lift a fold of the black velvet and to finger it, as though a sales girl had just pushed a bolt over the counter toward her, and she had laughed. Then Jeff slapped her, hard, for the print of his hand was white and then red across her face. He put his arm around her and led her away. She was crying then and the long choking sobs were almost as awful as that first terrible laughter.

It was Amelia's face that was the worst of all. There had been no grief nor horror on it, just a cold look that made it seem as dead as Eve's. Only once had Amelia shown any emotion. When she had started to go to Eve and Peterson's hand shot out to grasp her wrist, she had wrenched herself free as easily as if her arm had been imprisoned in a filmy spider web.

Kneeling beside her mistress she had lifted the cloak and thrown it over Eve's back and shoulders. Slowly she stood up. "You've killed her," she said. Each word was an icicle. "Don't stare at her now. She'd rather you kill her than stare."

I rubbed a clear space in the steamy window glass and peered out. We were passing Forty-eighth Street. Could it have been only last night, only nine hours ago, that Carol and I walked past this street on our way to the theater? My mind went hurtling back over those hours, seeing it all in gruesome detail; I couldn't stop it.

That static moment after Amelia's outburst which had been jabbed by Peterson's quiet cursing and Sullavan's rough voice barking into the telephone. The men trooping in from the radio cars. Blue uniforms dotting the stage, herding us into corners, standing over Eve's body. Orders in brief, sharp tones.

The door swinging wide to admit more men in uniform, more plain-clothes men, the coroner, photographers. They kept on coming, a steady one-way stream through old Nick's stage door. And in the alley outside the mumbling of the quick-gathered crowd and the yammering of the newspapermen.

I had answered questions, the same questions, until the words I spoke had taken on an unfamiliar sound and my throat grew dry and bitter. Over and over I told my story. I told it to a man with beetling brows and a ridiculously gentle voice who was the Inspector, and the police stenographer's pencil flew across his notebook as I talked. I told it to a fat detective sergeant and to a skinny red-haired one. I droned through it again for the two special investigators from the District Attorney's office, one who fumed and snapped at me, one who seemed to hardly listen.

Jinx Contributes

THOSE hours had the timelessness of a nightmare. When for a moment I had stood alone watching the coroner examine Eve, it seemed that all of it had been squeezed into a few brief seconds. But when I faced the barrage of seemingly endless questions I felt that my whole life had been spent on the stage of the Colony Theater and that those words were the only ones I had ever spoken.

We had heard the newsboys on the street yelling about the "Big Theyater Moider" before they had let us go.

Now it was over. Eve was dead and Carol was alive. There had been no arrests. I leaned my head wearily against the icy pane and it felt good. There had been no arrests. Then it wasn't over. Eve was dead but it wasn't over. Somewhere, someone was still waiting to kill Carol.

The cab stopped in front of our apartment and we went in. Jinx was sitting cross-legged on the bench in the lobby, half asleep. He jumped up with a start when the door slammed closed behind us and his bland, sleepy face told me that no word of the Colony murder had reached his ears yet. None of us wanted to inform him; we'd had enough of murder for one night.

Jinx winked one of his popping eyes at Jeff. "I see you ain't scared of riding with me no more," he chuckled.

Jeff made a noble attempt at lightness. "You're the safest pilot I've ever known, Jinx. I never know fear with you at the stick."

"You musta been scared Sunday. You walked up and down."

"I wasn't here on Sunday," Jeff said.

"Sure, you was, Mr. Troy."

I said, a little sharply, "There wasn't anyone here Sunday, Jinx. You've got your dates mixed."

He looked puzzled. "Yeah, I guess so. Sorry."

We went into the apartment and it was a warm and pleasant contrast to the bitter cold outside. I went straight to the cabinet under the built-in bookcases and put a bottle of Scotch on the coffee table. "I want a drink," I said. "A good, stiff drink. Do you?"

"Yes," Jeff said.

Carol reached into the cabinet and brought out a bottle of brandy and a shot glass. She filled the glass to the top and gulped it down. It was Courvoisier and very strong. Without even a grimace she refilled the glass and swallowed. When you'd been through what that girl had, I thought, you probably couldn't feel anything. Suddenly she set the glass down, walked slowly to the window and stood staring out.

"If I hadn't left my wrap on the stairs, Eve wouldn't have put it on. Eve wouldn't be dead. Eve would still be living and I . . ." She stopped and covered her eyes with clenched fists.

Jeff poured another shot of brandy and followed her. "Drink this."

BOTTLERS TAKE SOFTBALL TITLE AT SHEFFIELD

Sheffield, Aug. 8—The Penn Bottle team of the city softball league knocked off their third straight league championship Wednesday evening when they defeated the O'Connor Machine Company club, 5 to 2. The game was a playoff between the two clubs for the second half title and by winning the Bottlers, who also won the first half title, automatically annexed the 1941 championship of the circuit.

Earned runs in the game were 2 to 1 in favor of O'Connors, but the losers, who also outhit the Bottlers, 8 to 5, committed 5 errors to only 2 by the visitors. Steffan and Sanford were the battery for the champs. The Peterson brothers, Lagrant and Lamont, formed the O'Connor battery.

With Our Boys at Indiantown Gap

By Special Correspondence

Indiantown Gap, Aug. 6—Wednesday comes to the camp area here and we find it one of great activity and excitement. Our selectees arrived here in groups of thirty-three and 21 men respectively on Tuesday and Wednesday. They are a fine bunch of fellows and the men are all well pleased with them. The boys hail from Camp Croft, South Carolina, and a very hearty lot they are. After the men receive their various positions in the company and also their equipment that is to be issued to them they will leave for a seven day furlough which will be without a doubt one of the finest things that has happened to them since they have arrived here.

Fortunately we have enough rifles down here that every man in the company now has a rifle and they were all glad to get them as what is the use in soldiering without a rifle or some weapon that will make things more interesting. As a whole the men are quite well trained in every way and are a benefit to any organization which they might be in and luckily we have received them.

Several of these men are from the immediate vicinity around here although none of them in our own organization are as such. It seems that the climate these men are used to is really quite warm so therefore they don't mind this old man sunshine beating down on you all of the time.

The entire brigade (the 56th) went on an all day hike which consisted of approximately twenty miles. I don't mind telling you that it really was warm that day and every man came through without having to fall out. However, some of the boys had pretty sore feet but they all were up and ready to go the next morning so I guess that they will all be able to take what the army has to throw at them.

The Air Corps of the United States Army has set up a recruiting station here at the post and it is requested by them that all of the men who wish to reenlist in this branch of the service be encouraged to do so. We have not as yet lost any men to this cause except those that were heretofore mentioned in this column. We hope that we will not lose any men and if we do we know they will make good soldiers in whatever branch of the service they serve.

Last night at about 7:00 o'clock there was a very impressive ceremony at the regimental recreation hall. A technical sergeant from Company D of this regiment, and his bride were married by the regimental chaplain, Capt. Moser. The bride was dressed in navy blue and the groom, as would be expected, was in full dress summer uniform. As the newly wedded couple came out of the hall a firing squad of six men detailed for the occasion fired two volleys over the heads of the couple. After due congratulations had been said by the various members of the groom's organization, the couple left in a private car for a short honeymoon. We wish the sergeant and his bride the best of luck and hope that they will live a long and happy life together.

Our problem child, Corporal Carl E. Brown, has been cutting up again, only this time you really couldn't call it cutting up. It seems that the most sleepy man in the company yesterday happened to be Corporal Brown and it so happened that he went to sleep. The lieutenant, upon finding him asleep, soon aroused the sleeping noncom and it cost Corporal Brown just a few of the privileges that mean so much to him. Well, Corporal, maybe next time you will think before going to sleep. After all, you can't win wars by sleeping, although it is a nice pastime.

FLASH: Our First Sergeant Joseph L. Schearer, who was in charge of the train which brought our first contingent of selectees to camp, has announced that he was commended on his ability in the handling of the men on the train. Also the seargeant is very proud to announce that he spoke over the radio upon arriving in the Lickdale Station (Lickdale is the station where all of the trains come in to the Gap.) The sergeant brought the entire 407 men through from Camp Croft, South Carolina, to the Gap without losing a single man or having the slightest mishap.

The prize story of the week has been held back until now because it really is a good policy to leave the best for the last they say. Pvt. 1cl Leslie L. Brady, who is the guidon bearer for the company, was supposed to go out and take up a defense position on a combat problem. Pvt. Brady found himself a nice shady spot and proceeded to go to sleep. Well, it came time for the men to come in and thinking that Brady had gone on some errand for some one they came in without him. At about 9 p. m. in came the worn and bedraggled soldier. He claims that he strained a muscle in his leg and couldn't make it in until he rested his leg. Well, Brady, it's a great story but oh my, it looks awfully thin to us.

We are proud to announce the graduation of three of our NCO's from the division chemical warfare school. The men who graduated from this course are: Corporals Orvis E. Kinch, Samuel G. Bowers, and Sgt. Joseph J. Greer. We congratulate these men and hope that by their education in this type of warfare they may (if needs be) be able to save some of our lives.

It won't be long now until we will be shoving off for our big maneuver and our first one. We leave for the state of Virginia on or about the 23rd of this month and it really is going to be quite a thrill for the fellows to see all of the action we are going to see while we are there. As the plans for departure develop your correspondent will try and keep you posted on all that happens up to and including the day we shove off.

This being about all of the news for this time we leave you with this thought in mind, the boys will soon be leaving for a distant port so what do you say and answer some of those letters and write to the fellows often. So until my next column I remain yours truly, your Times-Mirror correspondent.

TIMELY BULLETIN

A bulletin prepared by the secretary of the Warren Chamber of Commerce for business men of the community stresses some little-known facts about the importance of the agricultural industry in the county, and to the business ability of the farmers who operate our farms.

It is particularly timely right now, since arrangements are being completed at present for community fairs in four different rural localities. Speaking of these suburban neighbors the bulletin says in part:

"To many town people, a farmer is practically a stranger—almost as being from a different world. Scarcely ever is he considered as an industrialist and a business man.

"But consider! Not only does he have to contend with the labor problem, the marketing of his produce, the maintenance of his costly equipment, as you and the manufacturer do, but he has to contend with the weather and innumerable pests of which you know nothing. He has to know something of chemistry as related to his soil; he must be more-or-less of a mechanic; he must be an accountant. In other words, whether you have heretofore granted it or not, he is a well-rounded businessman; and—he must be efficient to prosper. When he prospers, as most farmers do, his annual income in dollars and cents is as impressive as that of the shop man or the white-collar man."

The bulletin states that a recent Federal report credits Warren County with 2104 farms on which live approximately 23,000 men, women and children, whose farmland and buildings are valued at close to $5,200,000.

"In the course of the year of which we speak," the secretary says, "the farmers of Warren County produced milk, farm butter, eggs, wool and honey valued at $1,772,880; potatoes valued at $99,630; tame hay $370,740; fruits $69,270; and grain crops $327,450." The total of these farm products is $2,639,970—an impressive figure to compare with the Warren Borough industrial payroll of $2,883,600 for the same year.

The Chamber secretary feels that this rural market is one which Warren business men should not neglect and asks, "Why should they feel more at home—if they do—in neighboring towns or that they get better bargains elsewhere? We have what they want in Warren! It is up to us to persuade them of that fact!"

He closes with a plea that all merchants cooperate in efforts to make Warren the outstanding trading center of this section; and to such a plea we add a hearty AMEN!

Warren women will be interested to learn that even the beauty industry is being hit by the defense drive, for there's a shortage of zinc oxide for rouge and creams, aluminum chloride for deodorants, and bergamot, a perfume oil imported from Italy.

WEEKLY SERMONETTE

"A DAY OF SILENCE"

REV. M. I. HARDING
Epworth Methodist Church

Text: "Come ye apart in the wilderness and rest awhile."

Leaving the temple, Jesus went with His disciples to the Mount of Olives and there He spoke to them of the last things. It was also at this time that He gave those well-known parables of the Ten Virgins, the King returning with his servants, and the Parable of the Talents. His public labors ended, He sought a day of retirement, "a Sabbath to His soul before the Great Conflict". He spent the day at Bethany or in its vicinity, and doubtless in the company of His disciples. His disciples had suffered a great strain during the previous days, and there were many things He wanted to say to them concerning His coming death. They saw the growing hostility of the rulers and felt from the Master's words that a great crisis was at hand. Part of the day may have been spent in preparing their hearts for the dark days ahead. But it is also conjectured that a great part of the day was spent by Jesus in quiet communion with the Father.

All strong souls are born in solitude. Elijah was strengthened in solitude after the conflict on Mount Carmel. The burning bush where Moses met God was in the wilderness. It is in the quiet places that the soul finds God. It has been said, "If we would cease to be restless it must be at a shrine."

It is modern to laugh at the poor monks of the Middle Ages, who sought seclusion in the dens and caves of the earth, but let it be remembered by the Church and the Christian that these monks came forth from these places of solitude to work righteousness and to stop the mouths of lions, and out from these souls of solitude have come words that have thrilled the hearts of multitudes. The hymn of the cross is an example of the faith, hope, and love born in the solitude.

Jesus knew the power and value of secret prayer and communion. The soul takes on strength from such waiting, and it is for the want of such prayer that many souls go down in ignominious defeat before the violent assaults of the enemy. "They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength." "Be still and know that I am God".

"Peace, perfect peace by thronging duties pressed,
To do the will of Jesus, this is rest."

Vatican Only 108 Acres But Is Sovereign State

VATICAN CITY is the smallest sovereign state in the world. It comprises 108.7 acres, about the size of an 18-hole golf course. It is entirely surrounded by the city of Rome. And yet, 37 countries send diplomatic representatives to the Holy See.

The Vatican state came into being with the signing of the Lateran Treaty with Italy in 1929. The stamp above, one of the cross and orb series, was issued in 1933.

From 1870, the year of the unification of Italy, to 1929 the Sovereign Pontiff was only a guest in his own household and a voluntary prisoner. The Vatican was the property of the Italian government, which merely granted use of it.

The population of the autonomous Vatican State is slightly more than 1000. Under the Pope, there is a governor, secretary-general, central council, three courts, an "army" of 110 Swiss Guards and a police force of 100.

The Vatican has its own coinage, postage stamps, post office, welfare center, railway station and telegraph office. Marconi himself built the Vatican radio station.

CRANIUM CRACKERS

MEN OF THE PAST

Had there been headliners in days past, men like those described below would have had their names in big type. How many do you recognize?

1. What man was born on an island, died on an island, but once ruled nearly all of Europe?

2. Who caused the walls of Jerico to fall?

3. What former secretary of the treasury was fatally shot by a U. S. vice president in a duel?

4. What famous man from Rome once successfully invaded Britain?

5. What American ship master, later a famous pirate, was commissioned by Britain to hunt pirates, and was later hanged as one himself for attacking British vessels?

A Washington Daybook

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—"Sergeant York" is the only movie ever written from the Congressional Record.

As late as 1935, it was being written into the Record that Sgt. Alvin C. York, of Pall Mall, near Jamestown, in the mountains of Tennessee, could have made a fortune by exploiting his position of No. 1 hero of the World War—but chose only to pull in a few dollars for speeches and such, when the Bible Class of the Church of Christ and Christian Union needed them to carry on.

Until 1941, he turned down more offers from the stage and movies than the most romantic miss ever had in wildest fancy. But finally the need for funds to carry on his work in the Tennessee hill country drove the still towering, silent hill-billy, to put his John Henry on a Hollywood contract.

When he did, there were two stipulations he insisted should be written into it. The first was that Gary Cooper, whom he had never seen off-screen, should play the role of Al York. The second was that there would be no act of heroism or deed of bravery in the movie which had not been written into the Congressional Record.

Reams Of Description

THE results were that the studio making the film had to trade Bette Davis to get Gary Cooper for the title role—and the story's authors had to go to the Congressional Record for every detail of the battle scenes.

What they found there were reams of description, introduced into the Senate record by Sen. Kenneth McKellar of Tennessee, who still holds forth on the Senate floor and is the third oldest member of the upper house in point of continuous service. On the House side were additional reams of lurid description introduced by a slim, short-statured congressman from Pickett county, Tenn. He was addressed then as Rep. Cordell Hull.

Having seen the picture and read the Record, I can vouch for once that the Congressional Record proved a thoroughly adequate scenario. As a matter of fact there was one place where the Record was so vivid that the script writers had to tone it down. It had to do with the number of Germans Sergeant York picked off.

According to the Record, the gaunt, deliberate York (he was then a corporal, left in charge of a seven-man squad because all other officers and men had been killed or wounded) fired his rifle until it was burning hot and when 90 Germans marched down the hill to surrender (42 more were picked up later), it was because nearly 30 of their comrades had fallen under the deadly fire of this one-man blitzkrieg from the Tennessee uplands. The Hollywood scripters must have decided that was a little too much killing for the second elder of the Church of Christ. They cut the number in half.

Called It 'Natural'

OTHERWISE they followed the Congressional Record . . . and apparently close enough to suit the Sergeant. When he saw the picture for the first time, his first and only comment was: "It shore was natural."

The big, gangling, kindly Sergeant was in town recently and found the front door of the White House as wide open to him as that of his house on the farm in the hill country. There is at least one other door in Washington that is even wider open any time Sgt. Alvin C. York wants to walk up to it.

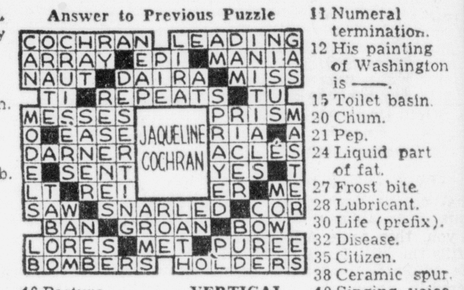

It's the one over at the War Department. There isn't a man living (and few dead from the Revolution on) who is a better ad for the U. S. Army. A rip-roaring, hell-raising hill man who got religion and had to wrestle with his conscience before patriotism overcame his objections to war, York is the kind of hero that the propagandists dream about. And the script writers, too. Imagine having to do nothing more than sticking to the letter of the Congressional Record to get a movie!

Storks that summer in Denmark spend their winters on Egypt's Nile river.

BY JUDSON BAILEY
Associated Press Sports Writer

The tangle in which National League pennant contenders have managed to involve themselves may straighten itself out to some degree during the week-end.

The Brooklyn Dodgers are on top of the heap today by three percentage points although tied in won-lost reckoning with the St. Louis Cardinals, who play three games in two days with the third-place Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pittsburgh, making a great drive, stumbled 1-0 yesterday on a magnificent one-hit pitching performance by 23-year-old Paul Erickson, who hadn't won a game for the Chicago Cubs previously this season.

All that kept the young right-hander from the pitching hall of fame was a single by Bob Elliott in the seventh inning. The Cubs, who combed John Lanning for 10 hits, collected their only run in the fifth inning on a walk, a double by Bill Nicholson and a single by Clyde McCullough.

This showed the Pirates how difficult their uphill battle must be. It was their third loss in 22 contests, ending a six-game winning streak. Since the first of August they habe cut a game and a half off the margin of the Cardinals, but even with their remarkable surge have lost an additional half-game to the Dodgers.

The week-end series at St. Louis should make or break the Pirates.

Brooklyn came through yesterday with its seventh straight victory as Whitlow Wyatt pitched six-hit ball to bulldoze the Boston Braves, 6-2. It was the 15th win for Wyatt.

An 11th-inning homer by Babe Young brought the New York Giants a 3-2 triumph over the Phillies in the only other National League tilt.

The slide of the New York Yankees continued with a 5-3 defeat by the Philadelphia Athletics in a night engagement which Bob Johnson won with his 20th circuit smash with two on in the fourth.

This was the first victory for the A's in six games and the American League leaders' sixth setback in eight contests.

The second-place Cleveland Indians were idle, but profited by a half-game.

The third-place Boston Red Sox outhit Washington, 16-14, and bunched their blows for a 15-8 triumph over the Senators, who haven't won a game played in Boston this year.

The Chicago White Sox rode roughshod over the St. Louis Brown for a 16-2 conquest.

St. Joe's Play Host To Butler Tomorrow

The St. Joseph Boys' Club softball team will entertain the Butler Adrian Club tomorrow afternoon on the West Side diamond in a doubleheader with the first game starting at two o'clock.

The visitors, one of the strongest teams out of Butler, will provide plenty of opposition for the local boys.

A silver collection will be taken up during both contests to help defray expenses of the Butler outfit.

T. Schinitski, with ten victories against only two losses to his credit, will start the first game for the visitors. The local battery was not announced.

CASEYS TOPPLE RECS IN TORRID SOFTBALL GAME

The K. of C. defeated the Recreation Center in a hot and heavy fracas in the City Softball League last night, 8-4, at a tempo which had the players at a near-boiling point various times for various reasons.

The game should have ended the second half of the loop, but due to mathematical opportunities for the R. C. to cop the same, all games rained out may have to be played.

So Monday evening the Elks will go into battle with the Caseys and if the latter club wins this contest, everything will be over in the second half. But a loss would force the playoff of the St. Joe's vs. Recreation Center and K. of C. vs. St. Joe's games.

Following the decision on the second half the complicated situation in the first half will be ironed out.

Harry Wooster pitched fine four hit ball to win last night for the Caseys and his mates scored eight times on eight hits to give him good support.

Harness Racing's Survival Hinges On Replacements For Old Guard

Driver Lee Smith lets Bill Gallon know how much he appreciates colt's victory in Hambletonian

By HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Service Sports Editor

New York, Aug. 9—It will take more than gasless nights and Sundays to restore to harness racing the proud position it once held.

The running horse game is too fast and fascinating.

What chance the sulky sport has of surviving on any sort of Grand Circuit scale depends on what measure of success its sponsors have in their race against time.

Their task is to interest more young men . . . to obtain replacements in the rapidly diminishing ranks of the Old Guard.

R. H. Johnson W. H. Cane

They could use a few more like Dunbar Bostwick of the jumping and polo playing set, and might well use his reason for driving as a sales talk.

It is that he can pilot trotters without any weight-making problem and can continue to do so as long as he feels like it.

Dunbar Bostwick, who at 35 practically is an apprentice in standardbred racing, was just a trifle too heavy to follow in the stirrups of his famous brothers, A. C. and G. H.

A. C. rode over timber for Ambrose Clark. He later owned and trained outstanding runners, including Mate.

But A. C. lacked the physical advantage as a gentleman jockey which still belongs to G. H. or Pete Bostwick, who continues to pilot jumpers at a natural 122.

Dunbar fears severe reducing didn't do A. C.'s health any good, and for that important reason sums up his brother's illustrious riding career as a big mistake.

Thousands See Trotters For First Time at Goshen

W. H. Cane annually hops up the harness dodge by running the Hambletonian Stake for 3-year-old trotters over his triangular mile track at Good Time Park, Goshen, a little cross-roads town 45 miles from Manhattan.

Billy Cane did a good job of selling this show to New York as the Kentucky Derby of the whirring wheels. It now plays to 25,000, all the ramshackle stands hold, and was worth $38,729 this trip. In Lexington, Ky., in 1929, when the total swag came to $55,484, there were no more than 2400 paid admissions.

The Hambletonian serves as an excellent show window for a dying game. Thousands see the trotters for the first time at Goshen.

R. Horace Johnston, a manufacturer of cotton piece goods and yarns in Charlotte, N. C., attended the Hambletonian for the first time three years ago as the guest of William N. Reynolds, the Winston-Salem tobacco tycoon whose Mary Reynolds the veteran Ben White brought down in front in the big number in 1933.

Horace Johnston, who had owned show horses since he was a boy and who had bred them for years on his 300-acre farm near Charlotte, was so thrilled that he wound up buying the 5-year-old Ed Lasaster from Bill Reynolds.

CANADIAN OPEN TITLE MAY GO CANNUCK AGAIN

Toronto, Aug. 9—(AP)—Two Canadian professionals, who have absorbed one important lesson from their United States rivals—that there's nothing like a good swat to carry the ball somewhere near the cup—today sought to bring home the Canadian Open Golf Championship that has gone over the border for 26 years in a row.

The Canadians were Bobby Gray, Jr., who held a two-stroke lead over the field going into the final 36 holes today, and Gerard Proulx, a consistent clouter from Montreal.

Gray fired a 65 that amazed his rivals and the galleries, and also set a competitive record for the Lambton course, to reach the halfway mark with a total of 135. Clustered behind him were six important contenders from the United States, then came Proulx with a pair of par 70's.

Johnny Bulla, another tremendous swatter from Chicago, was second with 137. Gene Sarazen, Horton Smith and Amateur Tom Draper of St. Louis, the first-day leader, had 138's, and Defending Champion Sam Snead of Hot Springs, Va., and Lloyd Mangrum, of Monterey Park, Calif., were tied with 139's.

According to estimates, each American family used approximately 2295 pounds of finished steel in 1939.

Pioneers And Forge Battle Tomorrow In One Game At Irvine

Society note—Bring a well filled basket, they're going to have a picnic at Wilder Field, Irvine tomorrow. Well, it might not be quite the same kind of picnic, but when the Meadville Pioneers clash tomorrow afternoon with the National Forge in a single game at three o'clock, every loyal baseball fan in this section is expected to be present to lend a hand to the cause, for the fracas shapes up as the "natural" of the summer among all the games past or coming on the Forge schedule.

All season the followers of the Irvine club have been asking for this game and here it is, right in their laps now, to do with it what they will.

Mike Cannavino has sent no lineup for his aggregation in tomorrow's game, but with an amazing record behind the club and the Forge record also being outstanding, both teams will have the best nine men they can get on the field when the umpire orders play to begin.

In fact, rumors have it that both clubs may "spike" their lineups a bit for this struggle, because the victory means plenty and they'll be fighting for blood.

If fans in this district like an exciting hard ball program, tomorrow afternoon's game should then be right down their alleys. For Cannavino's got a scrappy club, and this game has been built up for far too long to let the outcome be anything for either team to trifle with.

Both clubs have predicted victory for themselves, and both are mighty confident that they'll win.

The Forgers will start their regular lineup with Freddie Gagliardi slated to take the mound assignment.

EAST ALL-STARS GETTING READY TO MEET GIANTS

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—The Eastern All-Star football team, which will play the New York Giants Sept. 3 in the sixth annual Fresh Air Fund game, was completed today when Dave Allerdice, Princeton's great passer; Jim Castiglia, line-crushing fullback from Georgetown, and Pat Martinelli, Scranton University center, were added to the squad.

The entire squad is due to report Tuesday to go to the training camp at New York Military Academy, Cornwall-on-Hudson.

The selection of the eastern team this year was based to a considerable extent upon experience with the Notre Dame system, which will be taught by Coach Jim Crowley of Fordham. It's a big squad, averaging 202 pounds, and includes such well-known players as Charley O'Rourke and Chet Gladchuk of Boston College, Walt Matuszczak and Uick Drahos of Cornell, Frank Reagan of Pennsylvania and Augie Lio of Georgetown in place of the small-college "unknowns" who beat the Giants last year.

RUSSELL FIELD FENCE ABOUT DONE; FIELD HOUSE MAY BE NEXT PROJECT; LIGHTS POSSIBILITY IN FEW YEARS

It certainly didn't take them long to put the finishing touches on the fence project at Russell Field upon receiving the steel. The corrugated structure, which was delivered Monday to this city, is nearly complete at this writing and probably will be done when you read this column, which means that it was only four days in the construction stage. That's the way things should move along, and it makes everyone feel better all the way around. It's only a suggestion we have here, and as we understand it it may be included in next year's school program which will be swell, but otherwise this corner would figure it to be wise to build the field house for Russell Field now, while the park is being remodeled, and doing everything at once. Of course, it must be realized that the silver with which to do all this is limited, but many costs could be saved, we believe, by making it one big project, instead of adding piece by piece. However, if the field house can be included in next year's program, there will be no disappointments, and within five years Warren will have a field second to none in the section.

It's quite certain that with the fence enclosing the park now, sports are going to enjoy better business at the juke boxes starting with the fast approaching football season. Therefore, it looks as though next year will see some baseball back in Warren, and whether the government rations gasoline or not, fans will be able to "hoof" it over to Russell Field to see some fine entertainment on the diamond—that is, unless they ration shoe leather also. But another point this writer would like to bring out, and this is especially to the independent football, baseball, and also scholastic grid teams is that if they all would like to play a percentage of games under mazdas in a few years to come, the easiest way to get a lighting system (which, incidentally can be installed under new figures we have, for no more than $8,000) would be to deposit a percentage of each gate from every athletic contest at the field for the next few years, all in one big savings until enough money was in the ex-chequer to make it possible for them to play under the stars.

COFFIN CORNER CANNONADE . . . The downtown coaches association is swinging into action across the street in Harry's "Fountain of Youth", and you can drop in most any night and get a line on the Red Jackets . . . But here are some added things for them to worry over, if they should desire . . . The boys want to know if you're going to fill a Jacket uniform this fall Harry Wooster . . . Any guy that can pitch softball and win like you do, certainly can stand another year on the gridiron . . . Quit kidding them, Harry, Father Time doesn't rule with such an'iron hand . . . Anyway, you aren't old, just married . . . so we're betting you make the first touchdown . . . "Brud" Murphy, of Jamestown, is reported to have a game knee . . . Draft news tells us the new registration won't take any fellows until the first of the year, probably, so Martines probably will be in there . . . A couple of badly needed linemen will be back on the high school squad this season, and though they fought a losing battle this spring with that tough subject trigonometry, things are fixed so they won't have to wait until October 11 before being eligible . . . And don't blame these guys for failing the subject, we had a hard time spelling it.

The Lesson-Sermon also includes the following passages from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: Spirit. God, has created all in and of Himself. Spirit never created matter. There is nothing in Spirit out of which matter could be made, for, as the Bible declares, without the Logos, the Aeon or Word of God, 'was not anything made that was made.' Spirit is the only substance, the invisible infinite God" (p. 334.)

Around New York

By GEORGE TUCKER

NEW YORK—She looks as a ballerina should look. That's Tamora Toumonova, prima ballerina of the Monte Carlo ballet. She is Russian. She is vividly dark. She is 22.

But when I saw her she was sneaking through the corridor of the Meurice hotel, half frightened, murmuring "Moura" . . . "Moura" . . . "Come to me my precious Moura." . . .

But Moura had her thoughts on the hotel roof and scampered annoyingly out of reach and up the stairs.

Toumonova tossed her dark curls indignantly. (You always address a prima ballerina by her last name. I don't know why, but you do.)

I seem to have neglected identifying Moura. Moura is a seven-year-old Persian-Angora cat that has travelled the world and back again and loves it. But she has a yen for prowling in the sun on top of the hotel roof, and escapes the moment anyone opens the door.

The dance critics in New York agree that Toumonova is tops, and I won't try to add to the critical valentines they wrote about her in her most recent metropolitan appearances.

I WOULD rather tell you something about the girl herself, who, like the actor Paul Lukas, was born on a railroad train. . . . This was during the Revolution and "Mother was escaping through Siberia, and there I was," she explains. They were escaping from the Bolsheviks and they wound up in Paris, where, before she was six, Toumonova had begun her career in the ballet.

She said some very strange things for a young girl to say. . . . She said, "I think the happiest time of my life was when I was around 12, but I was not at all happy when I was 15 or anytime after that until I was almost 20."

I told her I thought this was most extraordinary because from 15 on most young girls are just beginning to meet boys and go out and have a good time.

"I was too old too young," she said. "I must have been 20 when I was 12. But that is all right. As I grow older now, I shall grow younger, like my mother. We are from the south of Russia, and when you are from the south of Russia you grow younger as you grow older."

* * *

THAT was a comforting thought, and as I am from the South myself, but of the U. S., I could almost feel the years fall away from my now reasonably ancient frame.

Toumonova gives herself just six years more as ballerina of the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. "Then I will absolutely get married in a hurry or I will be 28 and that is enough ballet."

She had not the slightest inkling as to the young man. . . . "Probably somebody I've never even seen. . . . But I will tell you this . . . It will be an American. I will not marry a Russian. It wouldn't go, not with my temperament."

So there it is, you young bucks, and don't say you weren't tipped off. Right now Toumonova is on the road with the Ballet Russe de Monte Carlo. . . . She goes from Texas to California and back again, and up through New England and Canada. . . . She has coal black hair that divides in the middle and dangles beneath her chin. Her birthday is March 2. She weighs 106, is five feet four. She adores Persian cats and likes Americans. Further than this, dement knoweth not.

CAPITAL GOSSIP

By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON — One of the duties of the departments of government is to keep the President informed. When any vital issue arises, the experts go into high and grind away on statistics and knowledge until they have turned out a clear summary and their best conclusions. Often, it is from such memorandums of fact and probabilities that the policy of the United States is shaped.

Such a matter of vital importance arose when Germany marched on Russia. The experts went into their huddles and, from authorities on labor, agriculture, economics, political activity, industry and military and naval affairs, went memos to be stacked on the President's desk.

As nearly as I can find out, only one expert, out of all the score or more, even closely approximated the course of the Russian-German war so far. All the rest said, in effect, that the Nazis would do just what they said they would do, and in record time—annihilate the Russian armies and take everything they wanted short of the Volga river.

But this one fellow (I can't disclose his name) figured it differently. Roughly, his conclusions were that the Germans first would win smashing victories, that somewhere this side of the Ural mountains or in them, the Nazi war machine would slow down and stall, and that ultimately the Russians would win the war.

Saw Russians As Russians

EVEN his timing erred in favor of the Germans and of course how right he is from here on in is with the future. But some of the steps by which he arrived at these conclusions are interesting.

In the first place, he believed that the Russian army was much better and more effectively mechanized than anybody suspected. The Russians, for years, had been positive that some day they would have to fight the Germans and they were not lulled into passivity by Hitler's overtures of friendship and cooperation. They expected attack and they built up and trained their army to meet it.

He buttressed this reasoni with an observation about R sian morale—namely that Russians are Russians first anything else (including C munists) afterwards. They mi be Georgians, Ukrainians, Wh Russians or Siberians; pro-Sta or anti-Stalin; but once the vader set foot on their soil, t would be Russians.

He argued, in opposition some of his cronies, that th would be no defection in Ukraine. Reports of what happened to some of their r tives in Poland would con the Ukrainians that the N would never leave their resources and their factories their hands, he thought. Besi he said, the only strong opp tion leader to Stalin in Ukraine committed suicide years ago, leaving a note that fight was useless.

The final important argum of this expert was that the G mans had failed to compute th risks by the cube root. He me by this that the German transp problem in attack was far grea than the Russian one in ret —that the Germans would h to create an endless belt of s plies and reinforcements o vaster scale and for far grea distances than they ever before. It would be failing grasp the enormity of a tra problem, the like of which t had never faced, he said.

Allowed For More Speed

THIS man figured that initial German drive would farther and faster than it has even thought the Nazis would in Moscow by now, perhaps e have the Ukraine. On this sc even he has been surprised—not as surprised as all those foretold complete Russian lapse in six weeks.

I must point out that the m body of opinion here still h with the other experts—not my one dissenter. It's just in esting that there was one to know that his conclusions arguments went to the Pr dent's desk almost in full that on some major points observations so far are hold against all the others.

power party" was partly annihilated and partly encircled in a surprise thrust.

This is on the central front some 200 miles from Moscow, but south of the main route to the capital.

Next the regular communique placed the location of this reported entrapment at Roslavl.

It also reported capture of Korosten, important junction on a subsidiary railway line about 80 miles northwest of Kiev, and south of the Pinsk marshes.

Adding these claims to last night's special announcement of a deep penetration of the lower Ukraine which by-passed Kiev to the south, the High Command had announced within about 14 hours the capture of 141,000 prisoners on two major fronts.

A communique last night announced the destruction of 25 Russian divisions and the capture of 103,000 prisoners.

The Russians suffered more than 200,000 casualties, the announcement said, and vast quantities of equipment fell into German hands, including 317 tanks, 858 guns, more than 5,250 vehicles and several loaded railway trains.

The High Command spoke of the victory as "the first great success" in the Ukraine, and German correspondents at the front predicted that Marshal Semeon M. Budyenny's army of the southwest would be smashed completely in a great impending battle of the Dnieper plateau.

Dnepropetrovsk, at the great bend in the Dnieper some 250 miles southeast of Kiev, was reported already under the bomb sights of the luftwaffe.

Berlin, meanwhile, experienced its second air-raid alarm in as many nights, but an official announcement said planes attempting to attack the capital were beaten off without causing any damage. Two of the raiders were reported downed.

(British sources credited the raid to Soviet bombers, which an announcement in Moscow said had made the Thursday night attack. The British said their planes raided northwestern Germany last night but did not attempt to approach the capital).

The great victory in the Ukraine announced by the High Command last night apparently was the result of an encircling movement which began July 12.

German ground forces, supported by the luftwaffe, were said to have swung to the south after the break-through while other Nazi and Rumanian units struck northward from the Dniester to catch the Russians in a trap.

The Russians apparently put up their stiffest resistance at Uman, 125 miles south of Kiev and about 225 miles due west of Dnepropetrovsk. German war correspondents said entire villages ringing this area were razed in the fighting, during which the troops alternately were drenched by cloudbursts and parched by intense heat.

CHUNGKING HAS TWO AIR RAID WARNINGS

Chungking, China, Aug. 9—(AP)—Japanese air raiders made three attacks on Chungking today, holding this capital under alarms totaling more than nine and a half hours between last midnight and 3:30 p. m.

They came in two main waves, plastering the city hardest during a raid which began at 11:35 a. m. and lasted until 3:25 p. m.

The alarm sounded again only about an hour and a half after the all-clear had ended the second raid and sent the populace scurrying back below ground.

They constituted the 26th series of air raids on Chungking since March 4th, the opening of what the Chinese call the "bombing season."

RICKETTS GLENN VISIT OF OFFICIALS PLEASES

Wilkes-Barre, Aug. 9—(AP)—Governor James and his secretary of forests and waters praised the beauty of Ricketts Glenn today and expressed eagerness to acquire the 13,000-acre virgin tract as a state park.

The legislature appropriated $150,000 to purchase the land, owned by the Col. William R. Ricketts estate, in Luzerne, Wyoming and Sullivan counties.

James and Secretary G. Albert Stewart headed a party of officials and persons interested in acquiring the land through the proposed park.

M'KEES ROCKS PLANT HALTED BY DISPUTE

Pittsburgh, Aug. 9—(AP)—A Federal conciliator today attempted to mediate a jurisdictional dispute among rival unions which halted operations at the McKees Rocks plant of the Pressed Steel Car Company yesterday.

Work ceased following a walkout by the CIO Steel Workers Organizing Committee, which demands recognition as bargaining agency. The Independent Association of Car and Foundry Workers has an exclusive bargaining contract with the company which was approved by the National Labor Relations Board.

MEADVILLE YOUTH IS KILLED ON COASTER

Youngstown, O., Aug. 9—(AP)—A 17-year-old Meadville, Pa., resident was killed and eight other persons injured when a pair of roller coaster cars left the track and crashed to the ground early today at Craig Beach on Lake Milton.

Dolphus Wooton died in the accident.

The Mahoning county sheriff's office said the injured included: John Miller, 17, and Richard Dauby, of Meadville, Pa. Autrey Douhit and Oris Dearmes, 27, of Buffalo, N. Y.

MARTHA RAYE IN CRASH

Los Angeles, Aug. 9—(AP)—Martha Raye, screen comedienne, plunged 150 feet down a canyon in her automobile last night, but escaped with only a sprained ankle. Lang said Miss Raye swerved suddenly to avoid a parked car and her own machine went into Laurel Canyon, near Mulholland drive.

last night in a second successive attack. Berlin radio broadcasts heard in London said the raiders were beaten off and identified them tentatively as British, but the British said their pilots had not been near the German capital during the night.)

A mid-day Russian communique declared fighting continued throughout the night with the key sectors unchanged. Battles were reported raging on the Karelian isthmus north of Leningrad, on the Estonian front, near Smolensk, and in the Bel Tserkov sector of the Ukraine, with patrol activity and minor local actions elsewhere.

A Moscow war bulletin on fighting yesterday named Korosten, 80 miles northwest of Kiev, as a battle center after several days during which that area had not been mentioned by the Red Army.

Elsewhere the Soviet picture of the front was the same as it has been for days: With fighting at Kakisalmi, on the Karelian isthmus 75 miles north of Leningrad; on the Estonian front, near Smolensk on the road to Moscow, and near Bel Tserkov, center of resistance against the big Nazi push south of Kiev.

The Russians said their air fleet — which German communiques have pictured as virtually shattered—smashed heavily at German troops and panzer columns along the front, and raided the luftwaffe's airdromes far behind the lines.

FATE OF VICTIMS OF ZAMZAM IS REVEALED

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—The German government informed the United States today that two Americans whose fate has been a mystery since the sinking of the Egyptian steamer ZamZam were still aboard the Nazi raider which sank her.

The ZamZam was sunk by the raider Tamesis 115 days ago and the United States government asked for information about the two, Francis Vicovari of New York City, co-leader of a British-American ambulance unit, and Ned Laughinghouse, Wilson, N. C., tobacco man.

Bot hwere injured in the ZamZam incident and were not transferred to the German transport Dresden, as were other Zamzam passengers. Where the Tamesis—and the two Americans—are now was not disclosed.

PRESIDENT IS BUSY WORKING ON PAPERS

Washington, Aug. 9—(AP)—President Roosevelt spent most of yesterday working on official papers, the Navy Department announced in a dispatch from the presidential yacht Potomac.

The dispatch said: "Cruise uneventful and weather continues fair. President spent most the day working on official papers. Potomac and Calypso moved close inshore today and received fuel, water and provisions."

There was no reference to the position of the yacht and the coast guard cutter Calypso, but previous dispatches reported the party was off the New England shore enjoying cool breezes and fishing.

The Third Army's 30,000 gasoline consuming vehicles — again nothing was said about multiplying by two—will need 450,000 gallons daily, or 59 railroad tank cars of gasoline a day.

RETIRED EDITOR DIES

Utica, N. Y., Aug. 9—(AP)—William V. Jones, 75, retired editor of the Utican Press, died at his home today after an illness of four months. He retired in 1936, having worked for the newspaper for 53 years.

MARKET PRICES STILL DECLINE

New York, Aug. 9—(AP)—Taxes and war doubts persisted as anti-bullish arguments in today's stock market and leading industrials added fractions to 2 points to recent losses.

Negative comfort was derived from the fact selling never seemed really urgent. Transfers for the two hours were around 350,000 shares.

The direction was downward from the start and few recoveries were in sight at the close. It was the eleventh straight session in which the list, on average, had made no progress. This was one of the longest stale-mates in a decade.

CHICAGO GRAIN

Chicago, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Wheat prices fell about a cent a bushel and corn sagged fractionally today as the grain market absorbed week-end profit taking and sales to adjust accounts. Scattered moisture was reported in some parts of the corn belt but there was no general relief from the dry spell.

Opening ½-1¼ lower, September $1.11⅝-¼, December $1.14⅞-¾, wheat later held near this range. Corn started unchanged to ⅜ off, September 78½, December 82-81⅞.

TENANTS ON STRIKE AGAINST RENT BOOST

Philadelphia, Aug. 9—(AP)—Eighty-six tenants of homes owned by the Shetzline estate in South Philadelphia have proclaimed a strike against a $3 rent boost and threaten to picket their landlord unless the increase is cancelled.

Women of the neighborhood signed petitions addressed to President Roosevelt, city council and the estate manager, declaring they could not afford to pay the higher rents because "our husbands are not defense workers."

KENDALL BUYS BRADFORD OIL REFINING PLANT

At a public aution held yesterday in Bradford, the Kendall Refining Company bought the Foster Brook Refinery of the Bradford Oil Refining Company for $305,000 after spirited competition from the Pennzoil Company, of Oil City.

The sale was conducted by Attorney Jack J. McDowell, representative of the bondholders and trustees of the closed plant. Sterns Marshall, president of the Citizens National Bank of Bradford and individual bondholders' trustee, ordered the auction.

Following the purchase, J. B. Fisher, executive vice president of the Kendall company, said his concern was interested chiefly in development of specialty products from Pennsylvania and from the standpoint of light oil storage.

"The amount of employment depends on developments in the special field," he said.

MADE UP TO KILL

Chapter 12
Kitchen Knife

CAROL brushed the brandy glass away. "They thought it was me in that big black wrap. I would have been there, where she was, in a minute. It was almost as if I killed her, letting her wear my wrap."

"Don't talk stuff, Carol," I said. "It wasn't your fault that she leaned against that scenery and messed up her own jacket.

Carol said, her lips quivering: "And then when I saw her . . . I laughed! I stood there and laughed!"

Jeff took her roughly by the arm. "Drink this. Or do I have to hit you again?"

Carol tipped back the glass and drained it. Her hand went limply down on the table and the glass rolled across the top, stopping with a clink against the china-book end. She watched it for a moment, then turned toward the bedroom. I started to follow her but Jeff caught me by the hand, holding me back. "Let her alone."

I sank down beside him on the studio couch. My eyes were burning with a tired ache, my whole body felt cold, somehow, and detached. Jeff was looking hard at the door through which Carol had gone.

"Jeff who did it?"

Jeff quirked an eyebrow. "Do you think I know?"

"You know something. You listened to them talking. The police, I mean. I didn't. I tried, but I couldn't. They talked in circles."

"They were going in circles."

"But they must know something, they have something to go on. It isn't like the poisoning. They have the knife. . . ."

"The knife came from the kitchen. Tom Neilson recognized it at once; he saw it in the cabinet drawer the first day of rehearsals at the Colony. He hasn't noticed it since, nobody has. Anybody could've sneaked it out of the drawer, any time. No," he went on quickly as I opened my mouth, "no fingerprints. Wiped off clean."

"But they must have some idea . . . about someone . . ."

"The only idea they have is who didn't do it. That's as far as they can get."

"Who do they think didn't do it"

"You. You were on stage. Ben Kerry. He was on stage."

"That couldn't be all."

"Not quite. Carol's eliminated."

"Of course."

"I mean she has an alibi because Peterson and I were with her from the moment she left the stage until you screamed."

I said in disgust: "Those three eliminations are a lot of help. Nobody else?"

"Listen, Haila. There were twenty-seven people people backstage tonight when Eve North was murdered. They say nobody came in and nobody went out. Twelve stage-hands, six people in the cast, Alice McDonald, Tommy Neilson and Phoebe, Clint Bowers, and the doorman, Eve North's maid and Peterson, Sullavan and I. You and Kerry and Carol are out. The detectives and I are out. Nobody else."

"Eve North is out," I reminded him.

"Yeah, and that leaves twenty. Tommy Neilson brought the curtain down the second you screamed. So he was near the rope at the other side of the stage from Eve. But he has no witnesses to his movements between the time of Eve's exit and your scream. Phoebe Thompson was on that side of the stage, but even she can't check on Tommy. She says she was standing in the wings with her eyes glued on you, trying to think of some line to throw you to get you out of the mess. Kerry had stuck you in, and she didn't see Tommy, didn't know he was there until he lowered the curtain. And Tommy can't check on Phoebe, so neither of them has an alibi."

Fifteen Suspects

"WHAT about Sullavan? He was on that side of the stage."

"Sullavan's no help. In the dark he couldn't tell Steve Brown from Phoebe in her slacks. There were twenty-seven people moving about backstage. Nobody can remember when or where they saw anyone else. Peterson nearly went nuts before he realized that this was one murder that wasn't going to be solved by placing people at the time of the crime."

"But, Jeff, there must be some alibis!"

"Not enough of them to help much. Five of the stage-hands were in the basement and they alibi each other."

"And where were the rest?"

"Around someplace. At the light switch, in the prop room, on the stairs into the basement. No alibis. Bowers was sitting on that pile of first act furniture in back of the set, and he saw people moving about. But that's all they were, just people, no specific persons. It was too dark. He thinks he saw Amelia coming out of the kitchen when you screamed, but he isn't even sure of that."

"What about the rest of the cast, Jeff?"

"Well, Philip Ashley was in his room on the third floor making a change. Alice's room is next to his and she was in it, but that doesn't give either of them an alibi unfortunately for she had her door closed and was 'wrapped up' in a script. Neither of them saw or heard the other. Steve was in his dressing room too, on the second floor, but Kerry has the room next to his and Kerry was on stage. So that leaves Steve minus an alibi."

"Stop, Jeff, I'm dizzy."

"You and me too. And Peterson. He finally ended up with fifteen suspects. And I'm adding another one for good measure."

"Who?"

"Greeley Morris."

"But he wasn't at the theater, Jeff!"

"Nobody saw him at the theater, you mean."

"But the doors were guarded!"

"Right. But the first chance I get I'm going to find out where and how he spent the evening."

"It was quite an evening."

I went to the table and poured another drink. The Scotch was begining to tingle through my cold insides and fuzz over the sharp ache behind my eyes. I shot some soda out of the siphon and stirred it noisily.

"Jeff, her back and arms. Eve's, I mean. What was it?"

"Burns."

"From long ago?"

"From very long ago. More than twenty years. A theater fire in Detroit."

"Are they . . . are they as terrible as they seemed to me?"

"Yes. Pretty awful."

"And yet no one knew?"

"No. Amelia told us. Eve had been such a beautiful woman. She could never reconcile herself to the fact that her neck and arms and back were ruined. Instead of getting over it or used to it she only became more sensitive as the years went on. She was still going to skin specialists, taking treatments all over the country. She was going now to someone in Philadelphia, going twice a week. That's the mysterious errand she was on this morning."

"And that was why she took Carol's wrap?"

Man In The Hall

HE nodded. "She must have leaned against that scenery, and then, realizing what she had done, whipped off her jacket to see the damage. There was a lot; the back of her jacket is thick with the stuff. I don't suppose she thought there would be time to get another wrap from her dressing room. Carol's cloak was there on the banister, almost beside her, and she must have thrown it on and stood there waiting for her cue. It was then that she got it. It was a pretty easy mistake. They're about the same height, the same build."

I said, thinking back over all the times I had seen Eve North on the stage and off: "She always wore such high-necked dresses and long flowing sleeves. I thought it was an affectation and really . . ."

"Yes. She lived in dread of being discovered. I think Amelia was probably very right. Eve North would rather have been killed than stared at."

"Poor Eve," I said.

I hadn't heard any sound from the bedroom nor the opening of the door, and I almost leaped when my eyes fell on Carol standing quietly in the doorway bundled up in my terry cloth bathrobe.

"I can't sleep and it's worse in there alone. May I . . . do you think I could have another brandy?"

I was at the liquor cabinet pouring it for her when a soft sly pecking sounded at the door. Jeff turned sharply and we watched him with apprehension as he moved to open it.

He had only pulled it a cautious inch before Jinx pushed his way in, closed and locked the door behind him and faced us, his eyes bulging.

"There's a man out in the hall!" he whispered.

"No!"

"Yes! He's been settin' on the steps for an hour. Should I call the cops?"

"Why?"

"I just read in the papers about the murder. This guy looks suspicious. He might be the one after Miss Blanton."

"Don't be silly, Jinx," I said.

"Awright, what's he settin' there for?"

"Have you spoken to him?"

"Not since I read about the murder. When he first come in I spoke to him. I asked him what he wanted. He said he wanted a little farm on Long Island."

"Is he drunk?" Jeff asked.

"Not so's I could notice, Mr. Troy."

"Did you ask him who he was?"

"He said he was Admiral Byrd. But he ain't. I seen pictures of Admiral Byrd."

"Jeff," I said, "you go talk to him."

"I don't want to talk to him."

"Please."

Jeff stepped into the hall and shouted, "Hey, you!"

VETERAN SCENTS TROUBLE IN OBVIOUS PLAY FOR GAME

BY WILLIAM E. McKENNEY
America's Card Authority

The world's leading Master Point holder until a few months ago, D. Bruce Burnstone had practically dropped out of bridge. When he heard, however, that our party was coming to the coast, he made a date by wire to play with Waldemar von Zedtwitz in the All-Western masters pair event.

Never having met the players participating in the event, I thought the pair made a nice showing when they finished third. Later in the week, Burnstone, with Lou Mathe, Meyer Scheifer, and Roscoe A. Puffer, won the All-Western team-of-four championship. This victory may eventually put Burnstone back in the lead as the holder of the greatest number of Master Points.

In my opinion Burnstone was always one of the greatest match point players in the country. Certainly his team, the Four Aces, has won more team-of-four championships than any other team. Today's hand helped Burnstone and his teammates win the All-Western team event.

Duplicate—None vul.

South	West	North	East
1 ♠	Pass	2 ♠	Pass

Opening—♣ 6. 16

The ace of clubs won the king. Burnstone (South) cashed the ace and king of diamonds and then led a third diamond to ruff in his own hand. When the diamonds split, Burnstone realized the board might already have been lost through his conservatism in the bidding.

He decided that the other team would probably reach game. Hence all he could hope for was to find a bad break in spades, and the heart ace over the king—else four spades would be a lay-down.

The play for game would be to cash the ace of spades, lead low to the king and cash diamonds. Burnstone deliberately avoided this line. He cashed the queen of clubs and ruffed out his loser. Then he cashed the king of trumps and started leading diamonds. East ruffed at once and Burnstone overruffed, then led a trump.

East could take his two trumps and ace of hearts, but could not prevent declarer from winning two more tricks. Thus Burnstone made four. The other team bid the game but went down one.
